plied, it might stem from what seems to be a reluctance on the part of legislative members to take part in convention deliberations.

Also briefing the county group were James A. Michener of Bucks County, a famous author and convention secretary; Judge Carleton Woodring of Easton, chairman of the finance committee, and Frank J. Pasquerella of Johnstown, chairman of the local government committee.

The action, taken at a lengthy sometimes heated meeting, brought into the open a long-simmering feud between elected delegates and the 12 legislative leaders who serve as ex officio delegates.

Delegate Matthew M. Gouger of Franklin County charged that some legislative leaders have been threatening to campaign against the convention's recommendations if any attempt is made to change the makeup of the General Assembly.

Roberts presided over the briefings, which were held in the Senate's majority caucus room. Historical changes Although final committee reports have not been submitted to the floor, the chairman indicated that several historical changes will be made in the 100-year-old state constitution.

Gouger later repeated the charge during an exchange with House Minority Leader Herbert Fineman, D-Philadelphia. "It ill behooves members of the legislature to constantly remind Constitutional Convention delegates that, if you tamper with the size of the legislature we will go home and work against it," Gouger said.

Quality of men "It is the quality of the men who come up here and the quality of the leadership that determines how effective the legislature will be."

Scranton also indicated that unifying procedure will be adopted for the operation of all Commonwealth courts. Presently, each county court operates according to its own ground rules.

Fineman had said he sensed "antipathy toward members of the legislature" had developed during the convention. If antipathy exists, Gouger re-

Donaldson added that reducing the House to 100 or 150 members would create "almost unbelievable" geographical districting problems.

England continues cutbacks

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson declared Tuesday Britain will withdraw its military forces east of Suez by the end of 1971, scrap a billion-dollar order to buy American-made bombers and cut social services spending — all in a drive for national solvency.

Wilson outlined his program before a tense House of Commons, saying he hoped to save $720 million in the 1968-69 fiscal year and $900 million in subsequent years.

Wilson's program included a phase out of Britain's last three aircraft carriers after 1971, and suspension of civil defense work. On the domestic front, cuts will be made in education, housing and road building.

In the costly social welfare program, Wilson announced an end to free prescriptions except for persons over 65, children under 15 and expectant or nursing mothers.

Although the prescription charge will amount to only 30 cents, some Laborites shouted, "Resign!" when Wilson announced this and other welfare measures, such as the ending next September of free milk in state secondary schools.

The decision to pull out of the Far East—save for a tiny garrison at Hong Kong—and from the Persian Gulf, leaves the United States as the lone major Western power in the smoldering region east of Suez.

U.S. senators talked of increased U.S. military responsibility that must be shouldered in the area, and U.S. officials also were unhappy about Britain's decision to cancel a $1.02-billion order for F-111 swept-wing bombers made by General Dynamics Corp. The plane was scheduled to carry Britain's II-bombs in the 1970s.

"We regret the British government's announcement regarding its forces in Southeast Asia and the Persian Gulf and the F-111 contract," said Carl Baruch, State Department press officer.

Broad interpretations To many members of the House, Wilson's program marked the day that Britain became Little England. That was the broad interpretation they gave to one of Wilson's key passages spelling out his government's reasons for abandoning Britain's world role.

"We intend to make to the alliances of which we are members a contribution related to our economic capability—while recognizing that our security lies fundamentally in Europe and must be based on the North Atlantic Alliance (NATO)," Wilson said.

Reactions were varied. One member of Wilson's Cabinet, Lord Longford, quit as lord privy seal and leader of the House of Lords in protest against a delay in education reforms.

Left-wing Laborites were glad to see an end of Britain's posture as a world military power.

One committee member said that when a couple "retires" they are looking for a "right" not a handout... and I think they are entitled to that right. We just can't shut the book on a person when he reaches 65."

Nation's economy leaps to new two-year record

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's economy took its biggest forward step in almost two years during the last quarter of 1967, a factor almost certain to be cited by the administration in the reopened congressional battle over higher taxes.

In announcing the advance, the Commerce Department said Tuesday inflation absorbed half of the fourth quarter increase in gross national product and more than half of the rise for the entire year.

Higher taxes are designed partly to dampen inflation. The department reported a $16.4-billion increase in GNP during the fourth quarter of 1967 to a record annual rate of $807.6 billion.

GNP is the value of all goods and services produced in the economy and is the most comprehensive guidepost to overall economic activity.

For 1967 generally, GNP totaled $785.1 billion, about $42 billion or 5.5 per cent above the previous year. But the department said 3 per cent of this was in higher prices and 2.5 per cent in real growth.

Somewhat smaller than the administration had hoped a year ago when it projected a real growth rate of 4 per cent. But the first half economic sluggishness during 1967 was deeper than anticipated, and labor union strikes cast a shadow over the second half.

Administration witnesses are expected to emphasize the third and fourth quarter figures, however, when they appear before the House Ways and Means Committee on Jan. 22 to appeal again for approval of the 10 per cent tax surcharge.

The fourth quarter gain followed a $16.1-billion advance in the third quarter and both figures reflect a strike at the Ford Motor Co., which began in mid-September and lasted through October.

The half year gain of $32.5 billion was the largest since the fourth quarter of 1965 and the first quarter of 1966 when the Vietnam war buildup produced a $35.9-billion combined advance.

Economists both in and out of government expect an even higher rise during the first quarter of this year than last year's fourth quarter.

Inventory buildup Almost a third of the fourth quarter increase was attributed by the department to a buildup in business inventories which increased to $9 billion at an annual rate compared with $3.8 billion in the third quarter.

It was the drastic decline in the inventory buildup during the first half of 1967 which produced the six-month economic pause.

Federal government purchases during the fourth quarter increased about $1.1 billion, mainly in national defense. The rise reflected pay increases for both military and civilian personnel.

The $785.1-billion GNP level for last year was right in line with administration projections.

There will be new anticrime proposals, for example, and additional suggestions for consumer protection laws. The administration sees potential November voter support in both areas.

The chief executive also will renew his plea for early passage of a 10 per cent income tax surcharge. But he won't, at this point, spell out specific proposals for a companion measure aimed at strengthening the dollar by curbing foreign exchange losses due to the spending of American tourists abroad.

employment shows drop in county

STROUDSBURG — Total employment in the Stroudsburg Labor Market area, Monroe County, during mid-December was 22,100, a decline of 1,300 workers from the mid-October level.

These preliminary estimates show that employment losses were experienced in nonmanufacturing industries, self-employed, unpaid family and domestic workers group and in farm employment, while employment in manufacturing industries held steady during the past two months.

Seasonal losses were also experienced in the service industries, government and construction employment, which were offset by gains in wholesale and retail trades.

Total unemployment in the county currently estimated at 700 increased by 400 persons above the mid-October level. This increase was influenced by the seasonal decline in employment and the withdrawal of seasonal workers from the local work force along with the increase in area unemployment.

Two also wounded by gunfire

GUATEMALA (AP) — Machine-gun fire from a passing car killed the two top U.S. Army and Navy officials in Guatemala Tuesday and wounded two other American military men. They were apparent victims of a wave of politico-gangster violence ravaging this Central American country.

Earlier in the day, machine-guns killed a former congressman from the era of leftist President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman, who was toppled in 1954 by a U.S.-supported army coup aimed at preventing a complete Communist takeover. The congressman's bodyguard also was slain.

Col. John Webber

Police quoted a gardener as saying the Americans, driving toward their homes, were shot from a green car that drove off fast.

The slain Americans were Col. John D. Webber Jr., 47, head of the U.S. military group in Guatemala since 1966; and Lt. Cmdr. Ernest A. Munro, 40, head of the U.S. naval section.

A machine-gun burst killed Webber instantly. Munro died in an ambulance en route to a hospital. Webber was from Houston, Tex.; Munro from Rockland, Maine.

The wounded were Sgt. Maj. John R. Forster, 42, of Salem, Ore., and Navy Senior Chief Radioman Harry L. Greene, 41, of Omaha, Neb. Greene was reported critically hurt. Forster was discharged from the hospital after treatment of an arm wound.

There was no immediate indication from police on the identity of the assassins or their motives.

Lt. Col. Ernest A. Munro Jr.

In the past year and a half, more than 1,000 persons, perhaps as many as 4,000, have died in the terrorism of political factions and gangsters.

The attack on the Americans occurred on the eve of the scheduled arrival here of Covey T. Oliver, U.S. assistant secretary of state.

The wave of violence has involved extremists from both left and right, organized hoodlums and a clandestine police-military organization combating all of them.

In the earlier killings Tuesday, Alejandro Silva Fallas, 40, a lawyer and congressman during the term of extreme leftist President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman, was moved down as he left his house.

HARRISBURG — A hearty band of Monroe County residents saw the best the Constitutional Convention had to offer on Tuesday and received an ovation from delegates for ignoring the weather to make the trip to Harrisburg.

Rev. John N. Roberts, a delegate from Mountainhome, was given the honor of offering the invocation before the morning session began in the House of Representatives chamber.

The small group was then briefed by the convention's chief officials and each one highlighted the non-partisan stance the delegates have taken so far.

About 12 persons accepted Roberts' invitation to spend a day viewing the first modern constitutional conclave in the state's history.

Roberts' resolution
The day was officially declared "Monroe County Day" after the delegates unanimously approved a resolution offered by Roberts.

Even though the group only numbered about 12 persons, former Gov. William W. Scranton, chairman of the Con-Con's judiciary committee, showed an interest in addressing the local residents and remarked that it was the first such group to attend the convention.

Scranton, who has said he will not return to politics, said he has never worked "with a more dedicated group of people" than the 163 delegates.

Also briefing the county group were James A. Michener of Bucks County, a famous author and convention secretary; Judge Carleton Woodring of Easton, chairman of the finance committee, and Frank J. Pasquerella of Johnstown, chairman of the local government committee.

Roberts presided over the briefings, which were held in the Senate's majority caucus room.

Historical changes
Although final committee reports have not been submitted to the floor, the chairmen indicated that several historical changes will be made in the 100-year-old state constitution.

Scranton indicated that it is likely that his committee will recommend that the selection of judges will be taken out of politics.

By this he meant that partisan elections for judges will not be allowed under the new charter. The former governor said it is still uncertain how judges will be selected.

Scranton also indicated that unifying procedure will be adopted for the operation of all Commonwealth courts. Presently, each county court operates according to its own ground rules.

During the afternoon, Walter F. Wilmarth of Kingsley, a delegate from the 20th Senatorial District, entered a lively debate during a finance committee meeting.

Wilmarth objected to a proposed provision which would grant real estate exemptions to certain needy homeowners.

To make up for the lack of tax revenue, the state would make in lieu of tax payments to the local taxing authorities.

Wilmarth maintained that this is purely a legislative function and was writing "welfare" into the constitution.

One committee member said that when a couple "retires" they are looking for a "right not a handout... and I think they are entitled to that right. We just can't shut the book on a person when he reaches 65."

5,084 Reds die in two weeks
SAIGON (AP) — Two weeks of open offensive operations have cost the Communists 5,084 dead by account of South Vietnam's military headquarters. The toll could be a factor in the enemy's latest reversion to ambush tactics.

South Vietnamese spokesmen announced Tuesday that 2,216 Communist soldiers were killed last week. This relatively high loss followed the record 2,868 who fell in the Dec. 31-Jan. 6 period of the Red winter-spring drive.

"Our purpose," Wilson said, "is to make devaluation work." The pound was devalued Nov. 18.

Included in the savings is a speedup in reduction of the armed forces, a phase out of Britain's last three aircraft carriers after 1971, and suspension of civil defense work. On the domestic front, cuts will be made in education, housing and road building.

Peace key issue in today's 'State of Union' message

WASHINGTON (AP) — Advance interest in President Johnson's election year State of the Union address is centering on what he may say about prospects for peace in Vietnam.

With war costs acting as a damper on big new domestic spending proposals, a key question is whether Johnson will deal directly with a recent indication from Hanoi that a bombing halt over North Vietnam would lead to some kind of talks.

It seemed almost certain Johnson would feel compelled to take up this situation when he appears before Congress—and, via television and radio, before the voters—at 9 p.m. EST Wednesday.

Marks time
Congress, which reconvened Monday, meanwhile marked time awaiting the address to a joint session.

Traditionally, the annual address is a summing-up of administration legislative proposals plus a broad review of the plans and hopes of the executive branch in areas foreign and domestic.

Johnson will talk, at least in general terms, about some new ideas for domestic legislation.

There will be new anticrime proposals, for example, and additional suggestions for consumer protection laws. The administration sees potential November voter support in both areas.

Freighter, gasoline filled barge collide in Texas

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — A Liberian freighter—still within view of an explosion and fire at a chemical plant near the Houston Ship Channel—collided with a string of gasoline-laden barges early Tuesday in a second major explosion and fire seen and felt for 30 miles.

Four persons were injured in the explosion and fire at the solvent unit of the Shell Chemical Co. plant. There were no injuries, miraculously, in the later explosion touched off when the freighter Christiane collided with the gasoline barges. A Shell employee died of an apparent heart attack attributed to the explosion.

Crash in channel
The collision of the two ves-els came 10 miles downstream in the channel from the chemical plant while the Christiane was in the early stages of an overnight run from Houston to Port Arthur, Tex.

The shock of the exploding gasoline turned much of the 50-mile ship channel—one of the nation's busiest such waterways—into a mass of floating flame.

The channel was closed to traffic for hours after the twin explosions that threatened some 190 persons with fiery death.

The Christiane's skipper, Capt. Pete Pamagiotou, 41, evacuated the ship except for himself and four crewmen. The ship was carrying dry cargo under charter to the United Fruit Co.

Loopholes patched in Social Security

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of six articles spelling out the provisions of the new Social Security law and Medicare.)

BY MARTIN E. SEGAL

The new Social Security law is much more realistic than previous laws. We have already touched on new provisions that recognized the reality of disabled widows, of industrial blindness, of actual earnings as opposed to taxable earnings. In this vein, too, is one dealing with the employment of a parent by a child.

Until now, the employment of a parent by an adult child as a domestic was not covered by Social Security, regardless of how necessary the work might be.

The new law extends Social Security coverage to such domestic service if there is need for it. The need is demonstrated if the adult child for whom the parent works is widowed or divorced; and if he has a child in his home who is under 18 or so disabled as to need the care of an adult. This coverage is also extended if the mother of the minor or disabled child is present in the home but is unable to care for her child.

This is a not uncommon situation. A widowed or divorced father often must have someone in the house to care for minor children. Why not let the grandparents of the children care for them instead of a stranger — and treat this as true employment in either case? The new law does just that.

Servicemen get break

The actual dollar earnings of members of the Armed Forces are not comparable to civilian earnings. In addition to their base pay servicemen also get food, shelter, uniforms (or uniform allowances), and other prerequisites. But since a serviceman pays Social Security taxes only on his base pay, his wage credits are appreciably less than those of civilian employees.

The new Social Security law recognizes this discrepancy and provides an adjustment. Starting this month a serviceman's Social Security wage credits will be assumed to be $300 more per quarter than the base pay on which he pays Social Security taxes.

If a serviceman earns $100 or less in a quarter, the additional wage credit will be $100. If he earns between $100 and $200 in a quarter, his extra wage credit will be $200. Over $200 earnings, the additional wage credit will be $300.

In order to qualify for a widow's (or widower's) Social Security benefits under the previous law, a widow must have been married to her deceased husband for at least one year prior to his death. The new law cuts this time down to nine months. If the deceased husband dies in line of duty in the Armed Forces, or dies as a result of an accident, the widow will, in general, be entitled to benefits if the marriage was at least three months old at the time of death.

About 100,000 persons not previously eligible for Social Security benefits are now eligible under a new clause covering workers disabled before reaching age 31.

Delays may be cut

Regular disability benefits require that the disabled person have at least five years of covered employment during the last 10 years before becoming disabled. Young people permanently disabled sometimes have had no opportunity to acquire so much coverage. The new law recognizes this and changes the provisions.

Now, any person between the ages of 24 and 31 will be eligible for disability benefits if he has at least half as many quarters of Social Security coverage as there are total quarters between his 21st birthday and the time he becomes disabled. For example, if he becomes disabled at age 28, he will need 14 quarters of coverage to be eligible for benefits.

Young people under age 24 will be eligible for disability benefits if they have at least 6 quarters of coverage earned during the three years immediately preceding their disability.

System to handle complaints

The best systems break down now and then, so we've had many letters complaining about undue delays in getting Social Security benefits. The new law sets up a formal method to get payments started.

In cases where Social Security payments have not begun 90 days after the last documents requested by Social Security are submitted, a claimant will be able to file a written request for payment. If payments are due, they must be made within 15 days after filing this request.

Where payments are interrupted — as when a wife's benefit changes to a widow's benefit — the written request can be filed on the 15th of the month following the month the payment was due.

This new complaint, and action, procedure begins July 1, 1968.

Sales tax on garage labor disputed by ex-legislator

EMPORIUM, Pa. (AP) — A former state legislator has been refusing to collect the state sales tax on labor performed at his auto repair garage on grounds it's discriminatory.

"Dentists and doctors don't have to charge the tax for their labor," Erwin L. Murray told a newspaper. "Neither do lawyers or printers or carpenters. Why should I? That's discrimination."

Murray said two men from the state Revenue Department recently came to his garage and wanted to explain the law and the sales tax regulations.

"Another state fellow came back later and told me they didn't want any publicity about this," Murray said. "Right now, while I'm talking to you on the phone, there's another state man in my office—a field auditor for the Bureau of Sales Tax."

Murray, a Democrat who served two terms in the State Legislature until reapportionment eliminated his seat, is now a Cameron County commissioner. He said he cast a key vote when a sales tax measure was approved in 1966.

Murray said regulations prepared by the state Revenue Department specify that the sales tax must be charged for labor performed by such business places as garages, service stations and dry cleaning shops. But a lot of other businesses, he said, aren't included.

"If a woman comes into my garage and has her car inspected," Murray said, "there's a $4 labor charge and she has to pay tax on that. Then she drives out and goes over to a beauty parlor and gets her hair fixed up for $15 and there's no tax at all. That's not fair."

"Insurance companies are really getting hit hard, too," Murray said. "When a wrecked car is repaired, the parts may cost only $200, but there might be $800 worth of labor. The insurance firms have to pay the tax on that labor."

Blue Cross hike okayed by hospitals

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Hospital administrators in the Lehigh Valley generally supported Tuesday a proposed rate increase for Blue Cross hospitalization insurance.

They gave their opinion at a hearing called by David O. Maxwell, state insurance commissioner to consider a request for an 11 per cent increase for group subscribers of Blue Cross of Lehigh Valley.

The administrators who supported the proposed increase and Earl G. Wray Jr., executive director of Blue Cross here, cited rising hospital costs, especially for labor, as a reason for the request.

Wray said Blue Cross has contracts with 10 nonprofit hospitals and 2 small private hospitals in the Lehigh Valley—generally Lehigh and Northampton Counties.

He reported there were 368,000 subscribers, representing 80 per cent of the population.

Dr. Stanley Zeeman, president of the Lehigh County Medical Association, said area physicians "are deeply committed to the Blue Cross program and are determined to assure its success as preliminary purveyor of medical insurance in the area." He cited the need to keep premiums at what he called an affordable level.

Navy change in command to be probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Joseph Y. Resnick, D-N.Y., dismissed Tuesday as "a bare-faced fairy tale" the Navy's explanation of the removal of Capt. Richard C. Alexander from command of the battleship New Jersey.

Navy Secretary Paul R. Ignatius, in a letter to Resnick, said Alexander was relieved at his own request for personal reasons completely unrelated to the case of Lt. Cmdr. Marcus A. Arnheiter, another skipper who lost his command. Alexander had publicly defended Arnheiter.

"I do not consider this a satisfactory reply," Resnick said at a news conference. "It is a crude, insulting and hypocritical evasion."

Resnick called on Ignatius to reverse the order assigning Alexander to a desk job in Boston and asked for a congressional investigation of the affair.

If the Armed Services Committee, which normally would conduct such an inquiry, fails to undertake the investigation, Resnick said he would do it himself. He conducted a similar one-man probe of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Relieved in 1966, Arnheiter was relieved in 1966 of command of the Vance, a radar picket ship off the coast of South Vietnam. Alexander expressed the view Arnheiter had been unfairly treated and filed a brief on the younger officer's behalf.

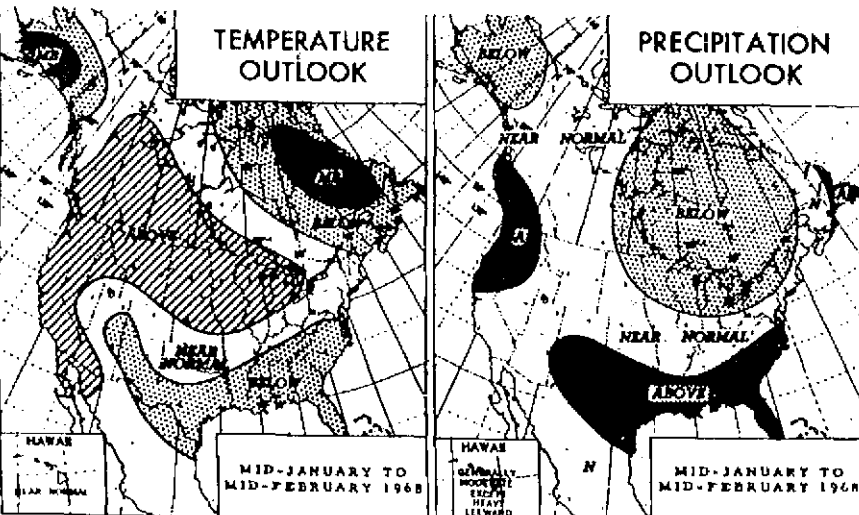

Arnheiter's mother lives in Resnick's district.

"Based on information I have," he said, "I categorically state that Captain Alexander did not resign his command. He was fired. He was forced to request reassignment because he committed a sin that certain admirals would not tolerate or forgive. . . . He said Arnheiter had been railroaded out of his command by a conspiracy of numerous junior officers, and deserved a fair hearing."

Paper blizzard in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Philadelphia didn't have a white Christmas last month, but it was hit by a blizzard of waste paper.

David M. Smallwood, streets commissioner, said 42,471 tons of rubbish, an all-time record, were picked up in Philadelphia over the Christmas-New Year holidays.

Riot feared in Japan

Pickets aim at Enterprise

SASEBO, Japan (AP) — Leftwing students and workers by the thousands converged on this southern Japanese port city Tuesday to mount massive demonstrations against the visit of the nuclear-powered U.S. aircraft carrier Enterprise. Reinforced police made preparations to prevent a bloody riot.

The Enterprise and the nuclear-powered frigate Truxton, bound for Vietnam duty, made their way toward Sasebo but the time of their arrival was uncertain. Informed sources said the Enterprise would visit Japan even though it may be delayed a day or two.

A Japanese government spokesman said earlier there was a chance the 70,000-ton carrier might postpone the visit. Other sources said the ship, originally expected Thursday, might arrive Friday or Saturday due to delay caused by rough seas in the western Pacific.

Masashi Ishibashi, chairman of the Socialist party's executive committee, said the Enterprise was delaying her arrival "because she is afraid of the demonstrations opposing her visit."

Scott urges role for Shafer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., endorsed Gov. Raymond P. Shafer of Pennsylvania Tuesday for selection as co-chairman of the Republican national convention's platform committee.

With Republicans holding the governors chairs in a majority of the states, Scott said, "It is important that the views of the governors be heard."

If Shafer is named co-chairman of the platform committee, Scott said, he would be willing to be chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation.

The vessels would be the first nuclear-powered surface ships to visit Japan, although nuclear powered submarines have made many such visits.

The Socialists, Communists, left-wing students and the radical Zengakuren students who oppose Japan's alliance with the United States, contend the visit will link Japan to the Vietnam war. Many of them also oppose the use of nuclear energy for war.

A total of 5,800 policemen with riot-control equipment has been mobilized in Sasebo to prevent the Zengakuren students from carrying out their threat to force their way into the U.S. Navy base.

Police, mindful of the bloodshed last November at Tokyo Airport when the Zengakuren students tried to block Prime Minister Eisaku Sato's departure for the United States, were taking every possible precaution.

Third in series on revised law

Loopholes patched in Social Security

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of six articles spelling out the provisions of the new Social Security law and medicare.)

BY MARTIN E. SEGAL

The new Social Security law is much more realistic than previous laws. We have already touched on new provisions that recognized the reality of disabled widows, of industrial blindness, of actual earnings as opposed to taxable earnings. In this vein, too, is one dealing with the employment of a parent by a child.

Until now, the employment of a parent by an adult child as a domestic was not covered by Social Security, regardless of how necessary the work might be.

The new law extends Social Security coverage to such domestic service if there is need for it. The need is demonstrated if the adult child for whom the parent works is widowed or divorced; and if he has a child in his home who is under 18 or so disabled as to need the care of an adult. This coverage is also extended if the mother of the minor or disabled child is present in the home but is unable to care for her child.

This is a not uncommon situation. A widowed or divorced father often must have someone in the house to care for minor children. Why not let the grandparents of the children care for them instead of a stranger — and treat this as true employment in either case? The new law does just that.

Servicemen get break

The actual dollar earnings of members of the Armed Forces are not comparable to civilian earnings. In addition to their base pay servicemen also get food, shelter, uniforms (or uniform allowances), and other prerequisites. But since a serviceman pays Social Security taxes only on his base pay, his wage credits are appreciably less than those of civilian employees.

The new Social Security law recognizes this discrepancy and provides an adjustment. Starting this month a servicemen's Social Security wage credits will be assumed to be $300 more per quarter than the base pay on which he pays Social Security taxes.

If a serviceman earns $100 or less in a quarter, the additional wage credit will be $100. If he earns between $100 and $200 in a quarter, his extra wage credit will be $200. Over $200 earnings, the additional wage credit will be $300.

In order to qualify for a widow's (or widower's) Social Security benefits under the previous law, a widow must have been married to her deceased husband for at least one year prior to his death. The new law cuts this time down to nine months. If the deceased husband dies in line of duty in the Armed Forces, or dies as a result of an accident, the widow will, in general, be entitled to benefits if the marriage was at least three months old at the time of death.

About 100,000 persons not previously eligible for Social Security benefits are now eligible under a new clause covering workers disabled before reaching age 31.

Delays may be cut

Regular disability benefits require that the disabled person have at least five years of covered employment during the last 10 years before becoming disabled. Young people permanently disabled sometimes have had no opportunity to acquire so much coverage. The new law recognizes this and changes the provisions.

Now, any person between the ages of 24 and 31 will be eligible for disability benefits if he has at least half as many quarters of Social Security coverage as there are total quarters between his 21st birthday and the time he becomes disabled. For example, if he becomes disabled at age 28, he will need 14 quarters of coverage to be eligible for benefits.

Young people under age 24 will be eligible for disability benefits if they have at least 6 quarters of coverage earned during the three years immediately preceding their disability.

System to handle complaints

The best systems break down now and then, so we've had many letters complaining about undue delays in getting Social Security benefits. The new law sets up a formal method to get payments started.

In cases where Social Security payments have not begun 90 days after the last documents requested by Social Security are submitted, a claimant will be able to file a written request for payment. If payments are due, they must be made within 15 days after filing this request.

Where payments are interrupted — as when a wife's benefit changes to a widow's benefit — the written request can be filed on the 15th of the month following the month the payment was due.

This new complaint, and action, procedure begins July 1, 1968.

Attention! It's now official — Greentown weatherman makes report

NEWFOUNDLAND — Snowmen makers, take heart! Get ready, skiing enthusiasts. The official weather forecast for 1968 is in, and, in the eyes of fuel salesmen, snowplow operators, small boys and skiers, it's a dandy!

The weatherman who is willing to stick his neck out to predict what's in store for the Poconos for the next three months is Norman Burrus, of Greentown. He has been Greentown's official weatherman for 10 years, and he's never made a misprediction yet!

Here in his statement on the weather-fare: (and hold on to your snowcap!) January will be an unpleasant mixture of rain, snow and sleet, with lots of ice thrown in for good measure. February promises snow every other day, same as last year. March will moderate only slightly enough to be miserable.

"It's going to be a rough winter," said Burrus this week, pulling his earflaps down more snugly around his head.

Unexpected storm

The Greentown weatherman came into being 10 years ago when Burrus tangled with an unexpected storm. He had a November vacation and went camping. Everybody knows you can camp in November — not much snow really shows up until late December.

But the morning after his vacation began, it snowed 12 inches. There he and Mrs. Burrus were in a lakeside cottage, all set for camping, and they were snowbound.

Now a man can be caught in a situation like that once. If he's smart, he avoids a repeat performance, and so Burrus decided to find out what the weather was going to be for himself.

He disregards the caterpillar, favorite prognosticator of many weather-predictors.

"Never saw a caterpillar that wasn't black front and rear, and brown in the middle, he scoffs. 'Apple and nut crops aren't accurate forecast-aids, either.'"

The way you do it is this way. Take the Ember Days, observe from which direction the wind comes. Watch the moon, too.

So, of course, you first have to know when the Ember Days are. Curiously enough, they are prayer and fasting days set aside by the Western Church as far back as A.D. 597, under the authority of Gregory the Great. A certain lack of uniformity in the early days led to a change, however, which came in 1055 A.D., under Pope Urban.

Ember weeks are complete weeks next following Holy Cross Day (September 14); St. Lucy's Day (December 13); the first Sunday in Lent, (March 3 this year); and Whitsunday, the fifth day after Easter (June 2).

Ember days were at first merely the fasts preparatory to the three great festivals of Christmas, Easter and Pentecost. A fourth was subsequently added, for the sake of symmetry, to make them correspond with the four seasons.

Rolling weather

The Ember Days are the Wednesday, Friday and Saturday in each Ember Week. The first rules the weather for the first month of that three-month period; the second rules the second; and the third accounts for the third.

Thus, the December Ember Days accounted for the winter weather now being served up; the first was icy, sleet and snowy, with wind coming from the southeast; the second found wind in the southwest, just as it was in 1955 and 1966 — and February was a snowy month to behold for the past two seasons. The third Ember Day in December found the wind coming from the northeast and moderating.

Weather forecasting in the Poconos is something many people do, probably because there's so much more weather in the mountains. And weather forecasters are in proud company.

It was Benjamin Franklin who discovered that storms move, when he found that the storm he experienced in Philadelphia was in Boston the next day. It was Napoleon who authorized the first organized weather forecasting to aid him in battle.

Also elected by the firemen were these officers: Robert Rechu, vice president; William Evans, Sr., treasurer; J. Wesley Akers, financial secretary; Emil Schoenagel, recording secretary.

William Evans Sr., was named fire chief, succeeding Charles Ehrhardt, who retired last fall after serving as chief for 25 years.

Also named were Stanley Gearhart, first assistant fire chief; Harold Peet, second assistant fire chief; Jacob Robacker, chief engineer; L. W. Gilpin, Sr., first assistant engineer; Arthur Frey, second assistant engineer.

Jones was elected as the new trustee, and Drs. A. V. Lupcho, Frank Uridel and Robert Christman were named to the First Aid Squad.

Walter Steiger prepared and served his annual oyster stew dinner for the firemen, a tradition which opens the new year for the members.

Farmers urged to consider correct program for grain

STROUDSBURG — Farmers who produce wheat and feed grains today were urged to "give serious consideration to their choices" in ASCS programs by Paul R. Everett, chairman of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee.

The chairman pointed out that Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman recently said that program participation "is the key to improving the supply and price situation for 1968 grain crops" and that it will also protect livestock producers against overexpansion.

The goal of the Department of Agriculture in this regard is a reduction in wheat acreage and the diversion of more acres from corn and grain sorghum production than was the case in 1967. Grain programs in 1968 are aimed at "turning the supply situation around" as a means of strengthening farm prices.

The 1968 Feed Grain Program is geared to an acreage that would produce about two to three per cent less grain than will be in demand — in contrast to the two to three per cent oversupply that depressed prices for the 1967 production.

The feed grain objective must be met if participation is to be at least as high as in 1967 when 1.4 million farms were signed up for the program.

If participation in the 1968 voluntary wheat program is as extensive as in 1967, wheat plantings should reflect the 10-million-acre reduction in the national allotment, USDA officials estimate.

Everett also said the signup period to participate in these programs has been set for the period Feb. 5 through March 15, 1968.

He commented, "The way entries are coming in, it will become an annual event." There will be no entry fee for contestants.

Lake Wallenpaupack, the largest man-made lake in Pennsylvania, is near Hawley, while Duck Harbor is situated a few miles north of Honesdale. Trophies will be awarded for the longest fish in each of the following species:

NEWFOUNDLAND — Two new teachers, and a new janitor were named by the Wallenpaupack Area Joint School Board during the January meeting, at which four new members of the board were welcomed.

William Blewett presided at the session in the school library. Mrs. Mary Smith, Palmyra-Wayne; Robert Goodman, Hawley; Earl Wilson, White Mills; and Paul Williams, Greene Township, were seated as new directors.

The resignation of Mrs. Jeanette Bates, homemaker teacher, was accepted, and Miss Barbara Sieg of Easton, was hired to replace her, beginning with the second semester.

Windows broken

Supervising Principal Maurice Bobst reported that exploding insulators on a pole at the Lackawaxen School had broken six windows, and that these had been repaired and PP&L contacted to move the pole. The explosion was not due to frigid weather conditions, he noted, but was caused when power was suddenly restored where it had been cut off. A broken water line at Hawley Elementary School was also reported repaired.

A bank balance of $45,323 was noted by Mrs. Olive Murphy, and bills totaling $72,167.53 were approved for payment.

Correspondence from Sen. Joseph Clark noting that he is against the Dirksen Amendment, and from senators Joseph McDade and Hugh Scott, favoring it, all in response to a plea by the board to support the amendment, was read.

A report from the hot lunch committee was given, showing that during a 15-day period in December, 2,505 student and 58 adult lunches were served at Hawley Elementary; 624 student and three adult at Blooming Grove; 1,260 student and 50 adult at Newfoundland Elementary; and 5,641 student and 145 adult at Wallenpaupack High School.

It was reported that the adult physical education classes, running for a 10-week period at the high school, are under way.

There was a discussion of the request of Dr. H. N. Owens, of Hillcrest School, for help in establishing an adult basic education course for residents over 18.

The meeting, attended by 27 of the 45-member board, was completed in 25 minutes, the shortest meeting on record for the joint board.

Attention! It's now official — Greentown weatherman makes report

NEWFOUNDLAND — Snowmen makers, take heart! Get ready, skiing enthusiasts. The official weather forecast for 1968 is in, and, in the eyes of fuel salesmen, snowplow operators, small boys and skiers, it's a dandy!

The weatherman who is willing to stick his neck out to predict what's in store for the Poconos for the next three months is Norman Burrus, of Greentown. He has been Greentown's official weatherman for 10 years, and he's never made a misprediction yet!

Here in his statement on the weather-fare: (and hold on to your snowcap!) January will be an unpleasant mixture of rain, snow and sleet, with lots of ice thrown in for good measure. February promises snow every other day, same as last year. March will moderate only slightly enough to be 'miserable.

"It's going to be a rough winter," said Burrus this week, pulling his earflaps down more snugly around his head.

Unexpected storm
The Greentown weatherman came into being 10 years ago when Burrus tangled with an unexpected storm. He had a November vacation and went camping. Everybody knows you can camp in November — not much snow really shows up until late December.

But the morning after his vacation began, it snowed 12 inches. There he and Mrs. Burrus were in a lakeside cottage, all set for camping, and they were snowbound.

Now a man can be caught in a situation like that once. If he's smart, he avoids a repeat performance, and so Burrus decided to find out what the weather was going to be for himself.

He disregards the caterpillar, favorite prognosticator of many weather-predictors.

"Never saw a caterpillar that wasn't black front and rear, and brown in the middle, he scoffs. 'Apple and nut crops aren't accurate forecast-aids, either.'"

The way you do it is this way. Take the Ember Days, observe from which direction the wind comes. Watch the moon, too.

So, of course, you first have to know when the Ember Days are. Curiously enough, they are prayer and fasting days set aside by the Western Church as far back as A.D. 597, under the authority of Gregory the Great. A certain lack of uniformity in the early days led to a change, however, which came in 1095 A.D., under Pope Urban.

Ember weeks are complete weeks next following Holy Cross Day (September 14); St. Lucy's Day (December 13); the first Sunday in Lent, (March 3 this year); and Whitsunday, the fiftieth day after Easter (June 2).

Ember days were at first merely the fasts preparatory to the three great festivals of Christmas, Easter and Pentecost. A fourth was subsequently added, for the sake of symmetry, to make then correspond with the four seasons.

Ruling weather
The Ember Days are the Wednesday, Friday and Saturday in each Ember Week. The first rules the weather for the first month of that three-month period; the second rules the second; and the third accounts for the third.

Thus, the December Ember Days accounted for the winter weather now being served up; the first was icy, sleety and snowy, with wind coming from the southeast; the second found wind in the southwest, just as it was in 1965 and 1966 — and February was a snowy month to behold for the past two seasons. The third Ember Day in December found the wind coming from the northeast and moderating.

Weather forecasting in the Poconos is something many people do, probably because there's so much more weather in the mountains. And weather forecasters are in proud company.

It was Benjamin Franklin who discovered that storms move, when he found that the storm he experienced in Philadelphia was in Boston the next day. It was Napoleon who authorized the first organized weather forecasting to aid him in battle.

Greene-Dreher's firemen elect slate of officers

NEWFOUNDLAND — Greene-Dreher Volunteer Fire Assn., meeting at the fire hall, elected Stanley Gearhart of South Sterling, president of the company, succeeding Rev. Franklin C. Jones, II, in the office.

Also elected by the firemen were these officers: Robert

Beehn, vice president; William Evans, Sr., treasurer; J. Wesley Akers, financial secretary; Emil Schoenagel, recording secretary.

William Evans Sr., was named fire chief, succeeding Charles Ehrhardt, who retired last fall after serving as chief for 25 years.

Also named were Stanley Gearhart, first assistant fire chief; Harold Peet, second assistant fire chief; Jacob Robacker, chief engineer; L. W. Gilpin, Sr., first assistant engineer; Arthur Frey, second assistant engineer.

Jones was elected as the new trustee, and Drs. A. V. Lupcho, Frank Uridel and Robert Christman were named to the First Aid Squad.

Walter Steiger prepared and served his annual oyster stew dinner for the firemen, a tradition which opens the new year for the members.

Politics checked at convention

The Constitutional Convention has used up half its allotted time and stayed remarkably free of controversy. On the surface it has accomplished little except reject some areas of study. Underneath, though, it may be doing better than people suspected it would.

Rev. John Roberts, Monroe County's only resident delegate, admits he is politically naive but believes that the best hopes for the convention are being fulfilled.

These are (a) no sidetracking of important topics by noisy minorities; (b) responsible work by committees; and (c) no politics.

Roberts says he is amazed at the studied lack of politics. Convention officers and committee assignments are split down the middle and party caucuses have raised no cheers for party allegiance.

"I have yet to receive an order or even a suggestion from party leaders," says Roberts, a Democrat.

This mid-way appraisal by our most local delegate couldn't be more encouraging. There are bound to be mounting controversies as a time for formal voting nears. It's impossible to imagine action without it on such things as reapportionment, the role of peace justices, enlarging the state's borrowing power, changes in status of tax exempt property and permission to change the form of county governments. But deciding these on the basis of the wisdom and conscience of the delegates rather than on party lines offers more hope for an improved constitution.

It's possible that the hefty majority voters gave the formation of the convention will be surpassed by the majority given the revised product itself in April. There's reason to be optimistic about what is being produced and how it will be accepted.

Long wrestling streak in jeopardy at Bloom

The longest victory streak we know of in local sports takes a shaky step onto the mats of Bloomsburg State College tonight. The wrestling Warriors of East Stroudsburg State have won 22 dual meets in a row (five this season). This could be the snapper.

Since streaks and records are made to be broken, a Bloomsburg victory would be no disaster but it would be a milestone of sorts. What's more the possibility of it has aroused extra interest in the event. Many local wrestling fans will miss the meet but many others will make the trip to see if Coach Red Whitman's team can squeeze through again.

There have been a couple of squeezes already. Matches against Springfield and Oswego both went down to the final matches where old reliable Gary Cook and new reliable Rich Schumacher have pulled them out.

Through the first half of this season, the ESSC team has obviously missed some of the stalwarts who piled up the bulk of the streak last year. But some of the newcomers have improved and the veterans have been consistent enough to keep the streak moving. Meanwhile Coach Whitman promises that in the second term newly eligible performers will improve the present squad to the point that it surpasses last year's.

While Warriors fans look forward to such a time, the team can't escape the moment of truth scheduled tonight in Bloomsburg. It's a big one.

Light side

With Gene Brown

Leaving Hartford Monday morning we took the usual turnpikes right to the heart of Boston, less than two hours from our capital to theirs.

I was due at a luncheon for Michigan Governor Romney who also wants to be President of the United States. Mrs. B. came along to see the museum which was closed (Monday) and she ended up having lunch at the Ritz Carlton which cost her $9, as bread and butter alone was 50c.

I ran into Jimmy Ottaway at the luncheon (free at the Ritz Carlton). He is publisher of the big New Bedford Standard-Times. Jimmy is also on the special Massachusetts Crime Study Commission and is on intimate terms with all the powers at the capitol. He is probably on intimate terms with the criminal mind. (I am never quite sure whether the purpose of a Crime Commission is to stop crime or start it.)

Governor Romney, impresses me as a vigorous dedicated governor, imbued with integrity and honest patriotism and would probably make a good president if he had four years of training for the job. Unfortunately we don't have any on-the-job training program for presidents.

Governor Volpe of Massachusetts was alongside Romney. He looks like an aide to Jimmy Hoffa but talks fluently and to the point. He is very popular in the state and bright enough to go further.

Romney failed to impress the Boston reporters who sat alongside Mrs. B. They commented that Romney was hackneyed in his approach to the problems, i.e., he outlined the problems but forgot to include the answers. Mrs. B. said that the reporters didn't bother to take notes, it had all been said before.

I liked what Romney said about words of truth. He remarked: "The difference between the right word and the 'almost' word is the same difference between lightning and the lightning bug."

The Allen-Scott Report

'Involvement' for McCarthy

Paul Scott

WASHINGTON — Senator Eugene McCarthy's anti-Johnson campaign is taking on a new dimension.

The Democratic "peace" candidate has agreed to take part in a Washington protest being organized by a New York based organization called the "Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam."

This anti-Vietnam war group is set to invade the nation's capital on February 5 and 6 to take part in a worldwide campaign to protest U.S. involvement in the war and to seek an immediate halt to U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

McCarthy, who will address one of the organization's strategy sessions during the protest, is listed among the "leadership for the mobilization" in the New York group's literature.

Other leaders include Dr. Martin Luther King, who is organizing his own demonstrations to "disrupt" government here in the spring; Father Daniel Berrigan, of Cornell University; Rabbi Arthur Lelyveld, president of the American Jewish Congress, and Dr. Harvey G. Cox, associate professor at Harvard Divinity School.

In addition to trying to rally congressional support against the Vietnam war, this group of clergymen plan to use their protest "to make clear our concern for young men of draft age who in conscience cannot fight in Vietnam."

FIGURE-HEAD CANDIDATE — McCarthy's decision to participate in this "direct action" anti-war protest came after his main financial backers threatened to withhold their support if the Minnesota Democrat didn't become more of an "activist" in protesting the war.

Financial pressure was also the reason behind McCarthy's decision to reverse himself and enter the March 12 New Hampshire primary.

As one of McCarthy's long-time legislative aides, who isn't too happy about the campaign, explained it: "The senator had virtually no choice. He entered the primary after his chief financial backers threatened to withhold their financial support if he didn't make the race. They told him that nobody would take his candidacy seriously if he didn't enter the nation's first primary."

McCarthy is now being pressured by these same financial backers to broaden his campaign to attract more Negro voters. They are demanding he publicly support King's coming massive demonstrations of civil disobedience here and Adam Clayton Powell's campaign to regain his seat in the House.

SKINNING THE CAT — House Democratic leaders are planning new strategy to try to speed up action on the President's legislative program so Congress can adjourn by August 1.

In an unannounced pledge to the President, the House leaders have agreed to by-pass important legislative committees if necessary to expedite legislation.

These revolutionary tactics are revealed in a letter that President Johnson sent Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., late in December, which reads:

"As for the Congress, I join you in urging the committees to hold early hearings on new and continuing legislation."

I have been informed by the House Leadership that next year (1968), if legislative committees of the House do not act promptly on measures within their jurisdiction, the Appropriations Committee will go before the Rules Committee and request authority for floor action on appropriations prior to authorization.

One veteran House committee chairman, after being shown the President's letter, remarked:

"That's news to me. If that is the House leadership's policy for this session, it will touch off a major revolt among legislative committee chairmen. They won't sit still and see their committees by-passed in that fashion."

MAKING A SECRETARY — Strong pressure is being exerted on President Johnson to appoint Washington attorney Clark Clifford as successor to Defense Secretary McNamara.

Clifford, who served in the White House during the Truman Administration, is being pushed by former Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas.

Although neither man holds an official position in the Johnson Administration, Acheson and Fortas have become the President's closest advisers on foreign and domestic policies from outside government. Along with Clifford, they helped the President shape his present Vietnam war strategy.

In pushing Clifford as McNamara's replacement, Acheson and Fortas are trying to block the President from going outside the Democratic party and picking "another Republican" for the key Cabinet post.

Odd man Bowles

WASHINGTON — The able way Ambassador Chester Bowles handled his mission to Cambodia shows that the President picked the right man for a delicate job.

A wrong gesture of misplaced word by Mr. Bowles and it wouldn't have been surprising for the impetuous Prince Norodom Sihanouk to have told him not to darken his palace door again.

But they got on well and as a result a good start was made to prevent the Vietnam from using Cambodia as sanctuary and violating its neutrality.

Prince Sihanouk took unorthodox steps to bring the meeting about. He had broken relations with the U. S. in 1965 in order to strengthen Cambodia's ties with Red China and North Vietnam. Instead of using available diplomatic channels, the Prince wrote to an American newspaper correspondent in Hong Kong — Stanley Kanow of the Washington Post — to indicate he would like to improve relations with the United States.

He went so far as to name the American emissary he would like to have President Johnson send to see him. Prince Sihanouk chose Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, a Democratic dove, a critic of the President's conduct of the war, and an advocate of a one-sided end to the bombing of North Vietnam. The Prince and Senator Mansfield would have been very comfortable with each other in all of these matters.

But the United States would not have had an effective spokesman for views of the government.

So the President decided to pick his own envoy. He chose a good man though some Americans appeared surprised at the choice.

They were surprised because some people think in political clichés, but Bowles departs from the conventional mold, or what many think the conventional mold is.

The conventional theory is that a Democratic liberal would be a Democratic dove, that any activist in the ranks of the Americans For Democratic Action would be hostile to the President on Vietnam, that an intellectual who writes creative books on foreign affairs would be pleading for the U.S. to get out of Southeast Asia.

Chester Bowles is all of these things and he is none of these things. He is a Democratic liberal but no dove; he is a strong and long-time ADAer, but a supporter of U. S. policy in Vietnam; he is an intellectual from the business world who thinks for himself and he thinks that the U. S. is serving the cause of peace by defending South Vietnam.

Devalued pounds

It was bound to happen. There is a new magazine called Weight Watchers. These people, I would guess, watch each other round the curves at the dinner table. An old friend of mine, Matty Simmons, runs it. He used to edit the Diners Club magazine, which suggests eating, and now he has gone anti-food with this whatchamacallit watchers.

His business manager is a girl named Enid, and you know what that spells backward. I don't know whether to buy a subscription or send a sandwich. A cavernous blonde named Jean Nidetch writes a readers column and I read part of the first letter: "I've lost 20 pounds and want to lose 40 more. In the meantime, if she has to lose 40 more, she has already lost the grinch who buys the clothes. Take three labelclothes and make a bikini. Better yet, look like Buddy Hackett. He's the only man I know whose vest picks up dust. The doctor takes Buddy's knee reflexes from the back.

Jackie Gleason — well, he's our founder, like Buddha. Rock his head back and forth and he pops like champagne. For a man who has to sit so far from the lasagna, it's amazing how much of it manages to get in his big mouth. My father's pretty good eater. Now, in his age, he has a shape like a boa constrictor after swallowing a reindeer. He thinks his chest slipped.

Deeoyed spring Simmons begins to lose me when he runs an advertisement that says: "The Springtime of a Woman's Life Should Begin at 55." The Springtime of a woman's life begins the day she meets the right man. It ends the day she marries him. Everything after is the winter of discontent.

Weight Watchers, I learned, have clubs. They go to meetings. You know, like Alcoholics Anonymous and Gamblers Anonymous. They watch each other and atone publicly for banana splits and lemon chiffon pie. After 7 p.m. the kitchen refrigerator is electrified. The box of chocolates has a bear trap in the top layer. A woman I know goes to bed with a photo of a chocolate layer cake and cries in the icing.

Losing weight isn't will power. It's won't power. Diets are worthless, as has been said many times, because fat slobbs like me think of a diet as something you get on in order to get off. Pills won't do it, either. They depress the appetite and jazz the nerves so high that I cha-cha when I go to bed.

At five a.m. I'm staring at the dark ceiling watching the colored meat balls go around. I get sexy dreams about thick steaks and home fries. I have a desperate brother-in-law, Emil Steeneken, who can dine on a bowl of Tabasco sauce if you'll let him put ketchup on it.

I'm 171. For a man five feet seven and a half inches tall, that's a hoghead of lard. My wife tries to seduce me into eating sauteed grass, but my stomach keeps shaking my esophagus no... Who likes wild rice? That's Mao Think. Mushrooms? We used to have chains on those things in the bathroom sink. Broccoli is an Italian ballgame.

Atra Baer writes an article about a Weight Watcher named Irene Edelbaum, 5 feet 5 inches, 347 pounds. She looked as though she had swallowed Jack E. Leonard. Now she's 197. Bully for her. To make her smile they have to pinch her cheeks. I hope she reads the article they have on herbs and spices. No one files on those weeds.

Skinny sick

There is a good fashion layout in color, but the models aren't Weight Watchers. They're all five feet thirteen and weigh 104 pounds. Sick. My wife is 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs 134. The only difference between her and Venus de Milo is that Kelly has arms. And hands, palm up.

She looks round. And I look around to see who's looking around her. Now Toots Shor — that's fat. Jimmy Cannon watched him waddle up a flight of stairs and said: "Reminds me of two little boys fighting under a blanket."

The Weight Watchers and Matty Simmons will do well. Far be it from me to point a finger, but Matty is fatty. If he goes down to 140, he'll be able to hide behind a letter opener. I played golf with Rocky Marciano today and, at 248, he looks like Italian Boys Town.

Once upon a time, Buddy Hackett and Jackie Gleason went on a diet prescribed by the same doctor. Hackett dropped weight. The Greatest picked up a gross. At Sardi's one evening Gleason was eating when Buddy walked in. "Hey Jackie," he said. "I lost 35 pounds. Look up, I brought the doctor with me."

Without ever lifting his head, Jackie murmured: "Doctor, you're killing that boy..."

Viva Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS — It makes one blink to come back to this place after an absence of four or five years. And I don't mean there's more neon.

What impresses the returnee is that the desert has developed a skyline. Everything was low-slung and spread out the last time I saw this Paris of the Plains. It was something of a rarity to live on the second floor of a hotel along The Strip. That was the top floor as a rule. This time I'm on the 18th floor, and there appear to be other hotels just as tall or taller.

The jingle-jangle seems much more muted than I remember it. Maybe they're using soft clichees in the slot machines. The gambling halls are quieter, too, and seem to have receded farther away from the front doors of the big hotels. Coincidentally, gambling now provides only half the income of the average hotel, where once it might have been 80 per cent.

Old Guard gone

I've been here for six hours and have yet to see a broken nose, a cauliflower ear or hear a "Desc" or even a "Dom." Where did the Old Guard go? Back to Detroit? Cleveland? Miami? Wherever they went, they went away richer — Except the few however, who were worse suckers around the tables than some of the rubes they tolerate only because they were losers.

The corporation types now sit in the high places. They are just as happy to see the high rollers come into town as was Benny Seigal — The patron devil of The Strip. Benny's Flamingo, the first of the posh ones along the strip, did more for this place than anything that happened until Howard Hughes dropped in.

But the corporate types play it cooler. The only game they play is "P and L," the "P" — for profit — is upstaging the "L" — for loss — that the big eastern banks are looking into this place as an investment area almost as keenly as the aforementioned Mr. Hughes. When their starched accountants arrive with the tool — Somewhat more elegantly than Frank Costello used to send it in — Las Vegas will move still farther away from Benny's dream.

This has become one of the greatest convention towns in the world I can recall the day when few big corporations would dare hold a meeting here. The cliché at the time was that executives, salesmen, distributors and what not, would gamble away their all and disgrace themselves, their families, and, worst of all, the dear old American Widge and Gadget Corp.

Now the air is as clear of that fear as it is of smog. Everybody comes to Las Vegas and more and more bring the wife and kids. Thousands enjoy the place though they never belly-up to anything more lethal than the hotel nevastand. The new-style types in the business offices and the chamber of commerce have broadened the profit base by extolling the non-gambling aspect of Las Vegas: The boating and water skiing, fishing on Lake Mead, golf on emerald courses that would have seemed like shimmering mirages to desert rats who once sought gold in this area long before the invention of the slot machine, and entertainment of a higher caliber than any other city or resort in the country.

But I miss the bad old days.... I was once assigned by INTERNATIONAL News Service to write a series on the hoodlums and moderately reformed mugs who were the 90 per cent submerged portion of the glittering iceberg that was Las Vegas. They all seemed to know what I was up to, and were nice enough to assign me a bodyguard.

Geon's revenge They took the resultant expose good-naturedly enough, except one owner of the Desert Inn. He gave me a hard time on night at Luigi's.

We'll call him Luke McGloob. But he cooled off the next day and, seeing me trying to rent a st of golf sticks at his hotel's fine pioneering golf course, he told me to use his own fine sticks. I thanked him, stepped up to the first tee, put down a new back-and-a-quarter ball, swung mightily, and drove it out of bounds into remotest Nevada.

McGloob's revenge. McGloob muffled, tight-lipped, just like Edward G. Robinson.

I miss the days of the early 1950's when the place was filled with newsmen covering the big atomic bang ups at Yucca Flat.... The all-night vigils in the often freezing desert.... the first dread of dawn.... the countdowns by someone with the voice of God.... the bracing of yourself... then the whole world, weird and shaking in scalding lightning and thunder.

Restoring hearing

WHEN should a person who is partially hard of hearing wear a hearing aid?

Mrs. B.O.L., Colorado Dear Mrs. L.: The key word in this question is "partially." As an ear, nose and throat specialist I am constantly made aware of the terms that people can create in order to avoid flatly saying, "I do not hear well at all times." Whether one says partially hard of hearing, partly deaf or slightly impaired hearing is not really important as a description of the severity of deafness.

There is only one real, mature, adult way to recognize deafness. When an individual has difficulty hearing on the telephone, the television and radio and does not have "happy hearing" at dinner parties or in the theater, they need some additional amplification of sound.

The old cliché, "It's not that I don't hear, but rather everybody whispers," is an easy way to avoid coming face-to-face with the problem.

The ideal way to handle a problem of deafness is first to be seen by an otologist, a specialist in the problems of the ear and hearing. A complete examination of the condition of the ears includes testing of hearing with tuning forks and a pure tone audiometer. X-rays of the mastoids are sometimes helpful if chronic infection of the ears is present.

Using a watch tick as an index of hearing has no validity. There are many more accurate methods of testing. When necessary the otologist may refer the patient to a nearby hearing and speech center for even more highly technical studies to determine the exact nature of the deafness.

The American Hearing Society in Washington, D.C. has about 150 Leagues for the Hard of Hearing all over America. Frequently doctors make use of their services.

There are now many remarkable new operations which can be performed safely for the return of hearing. A specific condition called stapesclerosis is a type of deafness which occurs in families and responds remarkably to one type of operation called stapes surgery.

Politics checked at convention

The Constitutional Convention has used up half its allotted time and stayed remarkably free of controversy. On the surface it has accomplished little except reject some areas of study. Underneath, though, it may be doing better than people suspected it would.

Rev. John Roberts, Monroe County's only resident delegate, admits he is politically naive but believes that the best hopes for the convention are being fulfilled.

These are (a) no sidetracking of important topics by noisy minorities; (b) responsible work by committees; and (c) no politics.

Roberts says he is amazed at the studied lack of politics. Convention officers and committee assignments are split down the middle and party caucuses have raised no cheers for party allegiance.

"I have yet to receive an order or even a suggestion from party leaders," says Roberts, a Democrat.

This mid-way appraisal by our most local delegate couldn't be more encouraging. There are bound to be mounting controversies as a time for formal voting nears. It's impossible to imagine action without it on such things as reapportionment, the role of peace justices, enlarging the state's borrowing power, changes in status of tax exempt property and permission to change the form of county governments. But deciding these on the basis of the wisdom and conscience of the delegates rather than on party lines offers more hope for an improved constitution.

It's possible that the hefty majority voters gave the formation of the convention will be surpassed by the majority given the revised product itself in April. There's reason to be optimistic about what is being produced and how it will be accepted.

Long wrestling streak in jeopardy at Bloom

The longest victory streak we know of in local sports takes a shaky step onto the mats of Bloomsburg State College tonight. The wrestling Warriors of East Stroudsburg State have won 22 dual meets in a row (five this season). This could be the snapper.

Since streaks and records are made to be broken, a Bloomsburg victory would be no disaster but it would be a milestone of sorts. What's more the possibility of it has aroused extra interest in the event. Many local wrestling fans will miss the meet but many others will make the trip to see if Coach Red Whitman's team can squeeze through again.

There have been a couple of squeezes already. Matches against Springfield and Oswego both went down to the final matches where old reliable Gary Cook and new reliable Rich Schumacher have pulled them out.

Through the first half of this season, the ESSC team has obviously missed some of the stalwarts who piled up the bulk of the streak last year. But some of the newcomers have improved and the veterans have been consistent enough to keep the streak moving. Meanwhile Coach Whitman promises that in the second term newly eligible performers will improve the present squad to the point that it surpasses last year's.

While Warriors fans look forward to such a time, the team can't escape the moment of truth scheduled tonight in Bloomsburg. It's a big one.

With Gene Brown

Leaving Hartford Monday morning we took the usual turnpikes right to the heart of Boston, less than two hours from our capital to theirs.

I was due at a luncheon for Michigan Governor Romney who also wants to be President of the United States. Mrs. B. came along to see the museum which was closed (Monday) and she ended up having lunch at the Ritz Carlton which cost her $9, as bread and butter alone was 50c.

I ran into Jimmy Ottaway at the luncheon (free at the Ritz Carlton). He is publisher of the big New Bedford Standard-Times. Jimmy is also on the special Massachusetts Crime Study Commission and is on intimate terms with all the powers at the capitol. He is probably on intimate terms with the criminal mind. (I am never quite sure whether the purpose of a Crime Commission is to stop crime or start it.)

Governor Romney, impresses me as a vigorous dedicated governor, imbued with integrity and honest patriotism and would probably make a good president if he had four years of training for the job. Unfortunately we don't have any on-the-job training program for presidents.

Governor Volpe of Massachusetts was alongside Romney. He looks like an aide to Jimmy Hoffa but talks fluently and to the point. He is very popular in the state and bright enough to go further.

Romney failed to impress the Boston reporters who sat alongside Mrs. B. They commented that Romney was hackneyed in his approach to the problems, i.e., he outlined the problems but forgot to include the answers. Mrs. B. said that the reporters didn't bother to take notes, it had all been said before.

I liked what Romney said about words of truth. He remarked: "The difference between the right word and the 'almost' word is the same difference between lightning and the lightning bug."

The Allen-Scott Report

'Involvement' for McCarthy

Paul Scott

WASHINGTON — Senator Eugene McCarthy's anti-Johnson campaign is taking on a new dimension.

The Democratic "peace" candidate has agreed to take part in a Washington protest being organized by a New York based organization called the "Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam."

This anti-Vietnam war group is set to invade the nation's capital on February 5 and 6 to take part in a worldwide campaign to protest U.S. involvement in the war and to seek an immediate halt to U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.

McCarthy, who will address one of the organization's strategy sessions during the protest, is listed among the "leadership for the mobilization" in the New York group's literature.

Other leaders include Dr. Martin Luther King, who is organizing his own demonstrations to "disrupt" government here in the spring; Father Daniel Berrigan, of Cornell University; Rabbi Arthur Lelyveld, president of the American Jewish Congress, and Dr. Harvey G. Cox, associate professor at Harvard Divinity School.

In addition to trying to rally congressional support against the Vietnam war, this group of clergymen plan to use their protest "to make clear our concern for young men of draft age who in conscience cannot fight in Vietnam."

FIGURE-HEAD CANDIDATE — McCarthy's decision to participate in this "direct action" anti-war protest came after his main financial backers threatened to withhold their support if the Minnesota Democrat didn't become more of an "activist" in protesting the war.

Financial pressure was also the reason behind McCarthy's decision to reverse himself and enter the March 12 New Hampshire primary.

As one of McCarthy's long-time legislative aides, who isn't too happy about the campaign, explained it: "The senator had virtually no choice. He entered the primary after his chief financial backers threatened to withhold their financial support if he didn't make the race. They told him that nobody would take his candidacy seriously if he didn't enter the nation's first primary."

McCarthy is now being pressured by these same financial backers to broaden his campaign to attract more Negro voters. They are demanding he publicly support King's coming massive demonstrations of civil disobedience here and Adam Clayton Powell's campaign to regain his seat in the House.

SKINNING THE CAT — House Democratic leaders are planning new strategy to try to speed up action on the President's legislative program so Congress can adjourn by August 1.

In an unannounced pledge to the President, the House leaders have agreed to by-pass important legislative committees if necessary to expedite legislation.

These revolutionary tactics are revealed in a letter that President Johnson sent Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., late in December, which reads:

"As for the Congress, I join you in urging the committees to hold early hearings on new and continuing legislation.

I have been informed by the House Leadership that next year (1968), if legislative committees of the House do not act promptly on measures within their jurisdiction, the Appropriations Committee will go before the Rules Committee and request authority for floor action on appropriations prior to authorization."

One veteran House committee chairman, after being shown the President's letter, remarked:

"That's news to me. If that is the House leadership's policy for this session, it will touch off a major revolt among legislative committee chairmen. They won't sit still and see their committees by-passed in that fashion."

MAKING A SECRETARY — Strong pressure is being exerted on President Johnson to appoint Washington attorney Clark Clifford as successor to Defense Secretary McNamara.

Clifford, who served in the White House during the Truman Administration, is being pushed by former Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas.

Although neither man holds an official position in the Johnson Administration, Acheson and Fortas have become the President's closest advisers on foreign and domestic policies from outside government. Along with Clifford, they helped the President shape his present Vietnam war strategy.

In pushing Clifford as McNamara's replacement, Acheson and Fortas are trying to block the President from going outside the Democratic party and picking "another Republican" for the key Cabinet post.

Devalued pounds

It was bound to happen. There is a new magazine called Weight Watchers. These people, I would guess, watch each other round the curves at the dinner table. An old friend of mine, Matty Simmons, runs it. He used to edit the Diners Club magazine, which suggests eating, and now he has gone anti-food with this whatchamacallit watchers.

His business manager is a girl named Enid, and you know what that spells backward. I don't know whether to buy a subscription or send a sandwich. A cavernous blonde named Jean Nidetch writes a readers column and I read part of the first letter: "I've lost 20 pounds and want to lose 40 more. In the meantime, if she has to lose 40 more, she has already lost the grouch who buys the clothes. Take three tablecloths and make a bikini. Better yet, look like Buddy Hackett. He's the only man I know whose vest picks up dust. The doctor takes Buddy's knee reflexes from the back.

Jackie Gleason — well, he's our founder, like Buddha. Rock his head back and forth and he pops like champagne. For a man who has to sit so far from the lasagna, it's amazing how much of it manages to get in his big mouth. My father's pretty good eater. Now, in his age, he has a shape like a boa constrictor after swallowing a reindeer. He thinks his chest slipped.

Deceyed spring

Simmons begins to lose me when he runs an advertisement that says: "The Springtime of a Woman's Life Should Begin at 55." The Springtime of a woman's life begins the day she meets the right man. It ends the day she marries him. Everything after is the winter of discontent.

Weight Watchers, I learned, have clubs. They go to meetings. You know, like Alcoholics Anonymous and Gamblers Anonymous. They watch each other and atone publicly for banana splits and lemon chiffon pie. After 7 p.m. the kitchen refrigerator is electrified. The box of chocolates has a bear trap in the top layer. A woman I know goes to bed with a photo of a chocolate layer cake and cries in the icing.

Losing weight isn't will power. It's won't power. Diets are worthless, as has been said many times, because fat slob like me think of a diet as something you get on in order to get off. Pills won't do it, either. They depress the appetite and jazz the nerves so high that I cha-cha when I go to bed.

At five a.m. I'm staring at the dark ceiling watching the colored meat balls go around. I get sexy dreams about thick steaks and home fries. I have a desperate brother-in-law, Emil Steencken, who can dine on a bowl of Tabasco sauce if you'll let him put ketchup on it.

I'm 171. For a man five feet seven and a half inches tall, that's a hoghead of lard. My wife tries to seduce me into eating sauteed grass, but my stomach keeps shaking my esophagus no... Who likes wild rice? That's Mao Think. Mushrooms? We used to have chains on those things in the bathroom sink. Broccoli is an Italian ballgame.

Atra Baer writes an article about a Weight Watcher named Irene Edelbaum, 5 feet 5 inches, 347 pounds. She looked as though she had swallowed Jack E. Leonard. Now she's 197. Bully for her. It's a good time

For frittering in kitchen

By LINDA PIPHER
Record Home Economist

Stroudsburg — I was glad that I had planned a five-thirty dinner last Sunday instead of a later one. The turkey was done and I was just getting ready to begin candying the sweet potatoes in the electric skillet and make the gravy when the lights went out. When they didn't come on in another fifteen minutes, we decided to go ahead and eat before the food got cold.

The white potatoes were barely tender, but with the help of candles to see by and a hand masher, I was able to mash them. But I forgot to put them on the table. In the confusion of carrying the food to the table via candlelight, the potatoes were overlooked and not missed until we were halfway through the meal. And I forgot the cranberry sauce I had made earlier in the day and put in my outdoor refrigerator (the screened porch). So with a candle, I walked on the porch to get the cranberries, and almost slipped as it was a glazed with ice.

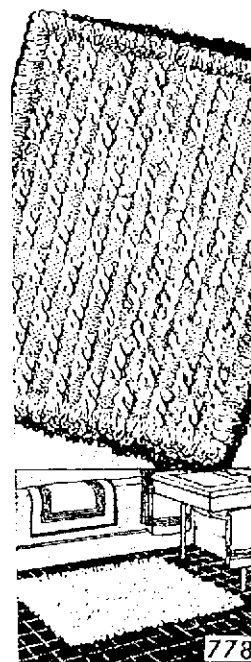

It was the first time my cousin Helen Severy had been to our home and I guess she'll always remember it. She had come by bus from Philadelphia where it was just rain and no ice. Aunt Helen met her and brought her and my mother to our house.

We managed to make instant coffee in the chafing dish after Aunt Helen covered the dish with foil so that the heat would reflect in instead of out (she teaches outdoor recreation which practically what this meal was!) Of course you know what bothered me during the whole episode? I kept thinking of all those dishes to do and I knew I wasn't going to be able to use the dishwasher! But thank goodness the lights came on later in the evening and the first thing I did was load the dishwasher, bless its little heart.

With another cold wave predicted for this week, it's good weather to stay in the kitchen and try some foods you have always wanted to prepare but never got around to. Like fritters. Wouldn't they taste good on a cold winter's night? Fish and meat fritters are nice for the main dish, vegetable and fruit fritters taste good with the main course. Take your pick.

And it was good to have a younger person taking an active interest in the history of the area. Particularly now when the next ten or fifteen years will bring changes to Shawnee more drastic than even those brought by the Indian raids during the French and Indian Wars and after its future history quite as decisive.

Russell didn't mention it but implicit in his talk was the fact that much of the area around Shawnee will be part of the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area or under the waters of the Tocks Island Dam.

But speaking of today's Shawnee, the Shawnee Country Club is planning its first mid-Winter house party this weekend at Echo Lake. For many of them the months between October and May when the club is closed are too long to wait to catch up on news. That should be quite a reunion.

One local member who won't be there is Betty Schell who was leaving Tuesday for California to be with her daughter, Margaret, and new granddaughter and namesake, born Saturday night.

The call announcing her arrival was timed just right to save Betty a lot of telephone calls since most of their closest friends were at the Schell's for their duplicate bridge club. With all the hub-bub the call caused, it's a wonder they could hear straight.

Shawnee's historical destiny changed by Indian wars

East Stroudsburg — The history of Shawnee as unraveled by Russell C. Cramer II at the annual dinner meeting of the Monroe County Historical Society, stretched from prehistoric times to the evacuation of the area following the French and Indian Wars.

The Indian raids came at the height of Shawnee's commanding place as the hub of the area with 3,000 persons counted among its inhabitants, and it never regained that place, Cramer said in his rapid and comprehensive review of that history.

He had drawn his material from old wills, store account books, research and current archaeological discoveries. He spoke at the well-attended dinner held in the dining room at East Stroudsburg State College.

Shawnee, as defined by Cramer, included the area from Delaware Water Gap North to Bushkill along the Delaware River Valley, known as Never-sink to the Dutch who first came to the region in 1660, as Minisink from the Indian tribes in the area, and as Smithfield in the colonial records.

Original people
"Excavations by college groups in this area have uncovered remains that prove it was the center of Indian life as early as 700 B.C.," he said. The findings indicate that they lived in small family groups on a seasonal basis, and were gatherers of berries, fruits and fish rather than hunters.

The Minsi tribe of the Leni Lenape Indian Nation migrated to this area from the mid-West and the Shawnee clan eventually gave the village its name. They were the most warlike of the tribes, Cramer said.

"The Leni-Lenape name means 'pure' or 'unmixed,' and they are regarded as among the most ancient of tribes, the original people," he added. Once rivals of the Iroquois, by 1600 weakened by disease and war with the Susquehannas, they became reluctant members of the Six Nation Council. Their council place was on Shawnee Island, Chief Kagawatchy, who led the tribe for 60 years, eventually led them back to Ohio, in face of the increasing friction.

Old Mini Road
Of early settlers in the area, Cramer told of the Dutch prospectors who first visited the area in 1654, building the first road in the area from Esopus in New York State 109 miles to the Copper Mines at Paha-quarry. The copper was hauled all the way to the Hudson for shipment on Dutch vessels going back to Amsterdam. The mines themselves were abandoned after the British take-over of New Amsterdam in 1664.

By 1684 settlements had sprung up along the Old Mine Road at Walpack and down the river. In 1725, Cramer explained, Nicholas DePuy, in search of what some say was a lost boy and others a lost cow, discovered the fertile land at Shawnee and two years later moved his wife and ten children.

Born in Rochester, N.Y., his father had fled from France to Amsterdam and later to New York State for religious freedom. Nicholas purchased the land from the Indians in 1728, but later had to buy it again from the Penns.

Cramer told of the visit of the colonial surveyors to the region in 1730 where they reported finding apple trees much larger and older than any in Philadelphia, leading them to believe that settlements here antedated Penn's charter. In this was the John Smith property, now belonging to the Harold Crossdales near Water Gap.

After years during which the settlers and Indians lived in tranquility and isolation, a new wave of settlers came up the river, Cramer reported. Largely Scotch-Irish they did not regard the Indians as "noble savages" but as heathens.

Durham boats
They came by Durham boats from Easton as early as 1737. Durham boats, Cramer explained, resembled canal boats and were poled up the river. They could carry 22 tons of grain and hides from the Minisink to Philadelphia.

"Not so successful were attempts to bring steamboats up the Delaware," Cramer reported, telling of the attempt in 1860 when the 100-ton Alfred Thomas was launched in Easton but exploded on its maiden voyage, and of the later attempt by John Brodhead with his Steamboat Kittatinny, which also sank after a boiler explosion.

By 1753, the settlers had positioned for a road through Totts Gap to Easton and later through Wind Gap to Bethlehem. These roads generally followed the old Indian trails and were possible only by horseback.

Meanwhile, the sale of frontier land by the Penn estate and later the Walking Purchase led to increasing bitterness with the Indians, Cramer said, reporting details of the Walking Purchase in 1763.

Taking advantage of an earlier agreement with the Indians to sell as much land as a man could cover in one day's walk, they blazed trails beforehand, set up feeding stations along the way and sent three trained runners covering twice as much ground as the Indians had thought.

Walking Purchase
Added to that, instead of drawing the line from the stopping place directly to the river, they drew the line northeast which included the area of the Minisink. Marshall, only one to finish the walk, claimed he was never paid for his services and lived in fear of his life. His wife and children were murdered by Indians in Slateford.

The Shawnee area reached its height between 1740 and 1755, Cramer said, when 200 families, counting up to about 3,000 persons, were centered in the area where there was the first grist-mill and the first store.

Reading from the ledger of Aaron DePuy in 1743, Cramer gave glimpses of the way of life of the times by what people bought and how they paid for it by barter rather than cash.

He also told of other early families in the area including the Van Campens who became related to the DePuy's by marriage. On their plantations they were assisted by slaves brought from Esopus, but later by indentured servants and apprentices. Jacob Stroud and Daniel Brodhead served their apprenticeships with the DePuy's.

Cramer quoted from the will of Benjamin Van Campen in 1780 giving all his slaves their freedom.

Shawnee church
The social life of the area centered around the Dutch Reformed Church, a log structure built in 1740 and served by John Freeman for 15 years. In 1750 a new church was built on the foundations of which the present Shawnee Presbyterian Church stands. It was not until 1762, however, that English services replaced the original Dutch. The church was used by a succession of denominations, Presbyterian, Dutch Lutheran, Baptist and German Reformed, he reported.

"At its height, with the only store, the only gristmill, successful farmers producing an excess of crops, the area was a hub of trade connected not only by the river, but also by roads, Shawnee residents could predict a great future," he said.

That bright future vanished when the French enlisted the help of the Indians against the British. The Indians distrusted both the British and the Iroquois with whom they had allied themselves," Cramer said.

On Dec. 11, 1755, 200 Delawareans attacked the Daniel Brodhead home in East Stroudsburg and burned the Mission in Stroudsburg which had been built for them. Unprepared for the uprisings, 78 persons were killed in subsequent raids.

Raid and massacres
Samuel DePuy gave an account of an Indian raid at Shawnee when two were killed and three wounded, attributing to the mercy of God the fact that all 22 persons had not died.

Later in the chain of forts stretching from Bushkill in Harrisburg, a stockade was built around the DePuy home-stand, where Fred Waring now lives, and it was designated as a commissary base for the whole area.

Cramer told of atrocities by the whites on trading Indians as well as by the Indians themselves.

By 1756, the major attacks by Indians had dwindled to isolated ambushes but by that time most of the settlers had left. After the peace conference in Easton, the settlers returned but settled north and west of the Shawnee area.

"From that time on Shawnee's history was to be determined outside its borders," Cramer concluded.

He was introduced by John Meixell, program chairman. Horace Walters presided at the dinner meeting. Among the guests were Judge and Mrs. Arlington W. Williams, County Commissioner Arlington Martin, College President Leroy Koehler and Mrs. Koehler.

Shawnee's historical destiny changed by Indian wars

East Stroudsburg — The history of Shawnee as unraveled by Russell C. Cramer II at the annual dinner meeting of the Monroe County Historical Society, stretched from prehistoric times to the evacuation of the area following the French and Indian Wars.

The Indian raids came at the height of Shawnee's commanding place as the hub of the area with 3,000 persons counted among its inhabitants, and it never regained that place, Cramer said in his rapid and comprehensive review of that history.

He had drawn his material from old wills, store account books, research and current archaeological discoveries. He spoke at the well-attended dinner held in the dining room at East Stroudsburg State College.

Shawnee, as defined by Cramer, included the area from Delaware Water Gap North to Bushkill along the Delaware River Valley, known as Never-sink to the Dutch who first came to the region in 1600, as Minisink from the Indian tribes in the area, and as Smithfield in the colonial records.

Original people
"Excavations by college groups in this area have uncovered remains that prove it was the center of Indian life as early as 700 B.C.," he said.

The findings indicate that they lived in small family groups on a seasonal basis, and were gatherers of berries, fruits and fish rather than hunters.

The Minisink tribe of the Leni Lenape Indian Nation migrated to this area from the mid-West and the Shawnee clan eventually gave the village its name. They were the most warlike of the tribes, Cramer said.

"The Leni-Lenape name means 'pure' or 'unmixed,' and they are regarded as among the most ancient of tribes, the original 'people,'" he added.

Once rivals of the Iroquois, by 1600 weakened by disease and war with the Susquehannas, they became reluctant members of the Six Nation Council. Their council place was on Shawnee Island, near Kagawatchy, who led the tribe for 60 years, eventually led them back to Ohio, in face of the increasing friction.

Old Mini Road

Of early settlers in the area, Cramer told of the Dutch prospectors who first visited the area in 1654, building the first road in the area from Esopus in New York State 109 miles to the Copper Mines at Pahaquarry. The copper was hauled all the way to the Hudson for shipment on Dutch vessels going back to Amsterdam. The mines themselves were abandoned after the British take-over of New Amsterdam in 1664.

By 1684 settlements had sprung up along the Old Mine Road at Walpack and down the river. In 1725, Cramer explained, Nicholas DePuy, in search of what some say was a lost boy and others a lost cow, discovered the fertile land at Shawnee and two years later moved his wife and ten children.

Born in Rochester, N.Y., his father had fled from France to Amsterdam and later to New York State for religious freedom. Nicholas purchased the land from the Indians in 1728, but later had to buy it again from the Penns.

Cramer told of the visit of the colonial surveyors to the region in 1730 where they reported finding apple trees much larger and older than any in Philadelphia, leading them to believe that settlements here antedated Penn's charter. In this was the John Smith property, now belonging to the Harold Crossdales near Water Gap.

After years during which the settlers and Indians lived in tranquility and isolation, a new wave of settlers came up the river, Cramer reported. Largely Scotch-Irish they did not regard the Indians as "noble savages" but as heathens.

Durham boats
They came by Durham boats from Easton as early as 1737. Durham boats, Cramer explained, resembled canal boats and were poled up the river. They could carry 22 tons of grain and hides from the Minisink to Philadelphia.

"Not so successful were attempts to bring steamboats up the Delaware," Cramer reported, telling of the attempt in 1860 when the 100-ton Alfred Thomas was launched in Easton but exploded on its maiden voyage, and of the later attempt by John Brodhead with his Steamboat Kittatinny, which also sank after a boiler explosion.

By 1753, the settlers had petitioned for a road through Totts Gap to Easton and later through Wind Gap to Bethlehem. These roads generally followed the old Indian trails and were possible only by horseback.

Meanwhile, the sale of frontier land by the Penn estate and later the Walking Purchase led to increasing bitterness with the Indians, Cramer said, reporting details of the Walking Purchase in 1763.

Taking advantage of an earlier agreement with the Indians to sell as much land as a man could cover in one day's walk, they blazed trails beforehand, set up feeding stations along the way and sent three trained runners covering twice as much ground as the Indians had thought.

Walking Purchase

Added to that, instead of drawing the line from the stopping place directly to the river, they drew the line northeast which included the area of the Minisink. Marshall, only one to finish the walk, claimed he was never paid for his services and lived in fear of his life. His wife and children were murdered by Indians in Slateford.

The Shawnee area reached its height between 1740 and 1755, Cramer said, when 200 families, counting up to about 3,000 persons, were centered in the area where there was the first grist-mill and the first store.

Reading from the ledger of Aaron DePuy in 1743, Cramer gave glimpses of the way of life of the times by what people bought and how they paid for it by barter rather than cash.

He also told of other early families in the area including the Van Campens who became related to the DePuy's by marriage. On their plantations they were assisted by slaves brought from Esopus, but later by indentured servants and apprentices. Jacob Stroud and Daniel Brodhead served their apprenticeships with the DePuy's.

Cramer quoted from the will of Benjamin Van Campen in 1780 giving all his slaves their freedom.

Shawnee church
The social life of the area centered around the Dutch Reformed Church, a log structure built in 1740 and served by John Freeman for 15 years. In 1750 a new church was built on the foundations of which the present Shawnee Presbyterian Church stands. It was not until 1762, however, that English services replaced the original Dutch. The church was used by a succession of denominations, Presbyterian, Dutch Lutheran, Baptist and German Reformed, he reported.

"At its height, with the only store, the only gristmill, successful farmers producing an excess of crops, the area was a hub of trade connected not only by the river but also by roads. Shawnee residents could predict a great future," he said.

That bright future vanished when the French enlisted the help of the Indians against the British. The Indians distrusted both the British and the Iroquois with whom they had allied themselves," Cramer said.

On Dec. 11, 1755, 200 Delawareans attacked the Daniel Brodhead home in East Stroudsburg and burned the Mission in Stroudsburg which had been built for them. Unprepared for the uprisings, 78 persons were killed in subsequent raids.

Raids and massacres

Samuel DePuy gave an account of an Indian raid at Shawnee when two were killed and three wounded, attributing to the mercy of God the fact that all 22 persons had not died.

Later in the chain of forts stretching from Bushkill to Harrisburg, a stockade was built around the DePuy homestead, where Fred Waring now lives, and it was designated as a commissary base for the whole area.

Cramer told of atrocities by the whites on trading Indians as well as by the Indians themselves.

By 1756, the major attacks by Indians had dwindled to isolated ambushes but by that time most of the settlers had left. After the peace conference in Easton, the settlers returned but settled north and west of the Shawnee area.

"From that time on Shawnee's history was to be determined outside its borders," Cramer concluded.

He was introduced by John Meixell, program chairman.

Horace Walters presided at the dinner meeting. Among the guests were Judge and Mrs. Arlington W. Williams, County Commissioner Arlington Martin, College President LeRoy Koehler and Mrs. Koehler.

E-L's newest merger not to be felt locally

HOBOKEN, N.J. — The chairman and president of the Erie-Lackawanna Railroad congratulated the Supreme Court's sanctioning of the Interstate Commerce Commission terms which called for the merger of the Erie-Lackawanna with the Norfolk & Western, the Delaware & Hudson and the Boston & Maine roads.

The merger of the four railroads came in the wake of Monday's merger of the two eastern railroad giants, the Pennsylvania and the New York Central in what was termed "the biggest consolidation in United States corporate history."

In a joint statement Monday, R. G. Fuller, board chairman of Erie-Lackawanna, said: "We are gratified that the unanimous decision of the special three judge district court for the southern district of New York has been affirmed by the Supreme Court and that inclusion of the Erie-Lackawanna in the Norfolk & Western has now been assured."

"Erie-Lackawanna will do all it can to expedite compliance with the Interstate Commerce Commission's order so that the substantial benefits to the public, shippers and security owners resulting from a joining of the two railroads may be realized as soon as possible," the statement concluded.

A spokesman for the Erie-Lackawanna saw no immediate effect on Monroe County on passenger train service through the Poconos as a result of the merger.

Schools to resume class today

STROUDSBURG — Area school superintendents anticipate the start of classes today, trusting the conditions of secondary roads will be declared safe after possible snow drifts during the night.

"There should be no problem this morning. With some of the ice having melted and with the work of the highway department, conditions should be all right for school today," Mrs. Pauline Peterson, Superintendent of East Stroudsburg Schools announced.

Solid agreement But all officials agree it still depends on change in weather conditions during the night.

"If there is no difference, there will be school," said Samuel Wells III, acting superintendent of Stroudsburg Area Schools.

"We are hopeful to open school today, said Dr. William P. Nye, Superintendent for Pocono Mountain Schools.

"There will be school today," announced John Mills, supervising principal of Pleasant Valley School District, "unless the snow does drift too much during the night. With existing icy conditions in certain areas it would still be dangerous."

Pocono Central Catholic operates on the decision made by Nye, as the schools use many of the same buses. St. Matthew's School also plans to open if other area schools decide to resume classes.

Classes in area schools have been closed for two days as the result of icy secondary roads and drifting of snow in many areas of Monroe County.

E-L's newest merger not to be felt locally

HOBOKEN, N.J. — The chairman and president of the Erie-Lackawanna Railroad congratulated the Supreme Court's sanctioning the Interstate Commerce Commission terms which called for the merger of the Erie-Lackawanna with the Norfolk & Western, the Delaware & Hudson and the Boston & Maine roads.

The merger of the four railroads came in the wake of Monday's merger of the two Eastern railroad giants, the Pennsylvania and the New York Central in what was termed "the biggest consolidation in United States corporate history."

In a joint statement Monday, R. G. Fuller, board chairman and G. W. Maxwell, president of Erie-Lackawanna, said, "We are gratified that the unanimous decision of the special three judge district court for the southern district of New York has been affirmed by the Supreme Court and that inclusion of the Erie-Lackawanna in the Norfolk & Western has now been assured."

"Erie-Lackawanna will do all it can to expedite compliance with the Interstate Commerce Commission's order so that the substantial benefits to the public, shippers and security owners resulting from a joining of the two railroads may be realized as soon as possible," the statement concluded.

A spokesman for the Erie-Lackawanna saw no immediate effect in Monroe County on passenger train service through the Poconos as a result of the merger.

Community Chest sets mark — but misses drive goal

STROUDSBURG — A mixture of jubilation and concern marked the meeting of the board of directors of the Monroe County Community Chest and Council held Tuesday afternoon at the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

The jubilation came with the announcement that the 1967-1968 fund campaign had reached a record-breaking total of amount subscribed: $4,298 above last year's total subscriptions.

The concern arose from the fact that the record-breaking total of $121,000 is still $2,747 short of the amount pledged to the 12-member agencies.

Each of these agencies will receive the full amount of the funds allocated to them at budget hearings, the board voted in subsequent action. Much of the discussion in between these two actions was concerned with the problem of this deficit financing.

In reporting on the campaign, Chester S. Miller, campaign chairman, said, "Considering reports at our last meeting in November when the prospects seemed pretty dreary, it pleases me to report that the amount pledged to this date is $121,002.57. This is the highest amount ever raised in this county."

Special thanks

Miller offered his special thanks to Nathan Meyers and the 75 members of the advanced gifts committee who oversubscribed their quota of $90,000 with total subscriptions of $91,014.50, and to those divisions which had reached or oversubscribed their quotas.

A review of past campaigns showed that the 1966-1967 campaign had also reached a new high of about 14,200 above the previous year.

Meanwhile, the goals have risen about $7,000 a year. These goals are based on the amounts allocated to various agencies, after realistic review of their requests and paring those requests down to basic needs.

The impossibility of continuing to spend more than is raised each year brought considerable discussion. Two possibilities were suggested: to limit the amount of increase in each year's goals, or post-budgeting. Post-budgeting would involve allocating agency funds only after the campaign had been completed according to the amount received.

The third alternative would be to increase the amount of giving to meet the proven needs of the agencies. The analysis of the 1967-1968 campaign showed that public Buck Hill Community Service; Barrett Community and Tolyhanna Army Depot reached or bettered their goals. The success of the county campaign, despite lack of workers, was attributed to the letters sent out by headquarters.

Subscribers low In other discussion on the campaign it was pointed out that the total of 6,333 subscribers was low compared to the total labor force in the county.

The decision on what to do about next year's campaign quota was referred to an executive committee which will report within the month.

Within that month, there will also be the annual meeting of the Monroe County Community Chest and Council with Feb. 8 set as the tentative date.

Ralph E. Reppert, chairman of the Community Chest, thanked all those who had worked so hard to reach the goals and termed the year a successful one.

He also had a challenge for the future. "We must continue to supply the money necessary for the services provided by our member agencies, or we are not fulfilling our function as a Community Chest," he said.

Mrs. Ethel West, executive secretary, presented both Reppert and Miller with scrapbooks of their year's achievements.

A chart of the campaign just concluded follows:

Incidents between students

STROUDSBURG — Several incidents involving high school students from Stroudsburg, Slatington and Emmaus have been reported to Stroudsburg Borough Police.

Late Tuesday night police had no additional information on the incidents.

A member of the Slatington basketball team was reportedly punched in the head and thrown to the ground by several Stroudsburg youths, following Friday's basketball game between Stroudsburg and Slatington.

The youth, who is unidentified, was taken to the General Hospital of Monroe County where he was treated for a bruise behind the ear and released.

Police said tempers became short after some words were exchanged about Stroudsburg's losing record this year. The local high school has lost all of its 13 games.

The other incident followed the Stroudsburg - Emmaus wrestling match, but no one was injured.

E. S. Bank elects slate of officers

EAST STROUDSBURG — The new chairman of the board of East Stroudsburg National Bank was named Monday during the annual reorganization meeting.

Thomas J. Breitweiser, 80 Anasomink St., East Stroudsburg, was selected for the position.

Clifford L. Cramer, vice president and secretary-treasurer of R. C. Cramer Lumber Co., East Stroudsburg, was elected president.

Other officers named were Dr. James C. Fahl, East Stroudsburg, vice president; W. Jack Wallie, assistant vice president and comptroller; Donald Pope, assistant cashier; Henry Tucker, secretary; and Betty Harshorn, assistant branch manager.

Re-elected were John Baynor, Stroudsburg, executive vice president; Jesse H. S. Flory and C. C. Lambert, both East Stroudsburg, vice presidents; Mrs. Velma Lanterman, cashier; and Kenneth Alspach, East Stroudsburg, assistant vice president and assistant secretary.

Planners reorganize for year

STROUDSBURG — Marshall C. Reese was unanimously elected chairman of the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday night during a meeting here in the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council Office.

Other officers elected to a one-year term were Vance Megargel, vice chairman and Joseph A. Lisicky, secretary-treasurer.

John Mills, chairman of the budget committee, reviewed the commission's 1968 proposed phase two budget of $41,000. Mills explained that after approval of the executive committee board the budget was presented to the Monroe County Commissioners for approval.

The budget shows a 46 per cent increase over last year's $28,000.

Mills cited a temporary breakdown of the budget: $29,000, salary; $4,000, fixed charges and $5,000, operation and other expenses.

An early acceptance of the 701 grant by the federal government could lower the proposed budget, Mills pointed out.

Reese wondered if there was any possibility of dovetailing the fiscal and calendar years of the 701 Housing and Urban Development funds with local planning so as to expedite the arrival of the 701 monies.

Leonard Ziolkowski, executive director of the planning commission, said that work was started last March on dovetailing these years into a state, county and local planning setup. He said phase one of the 701 project was not given approval until May, and was then amended in October.

In November it was reviewed in Harrisburg, and that it took from November to the present time to receive the application.

"The Harrisburg office told me that Monroe County's application has the highest priority and it assured me that the application will be approved in March," Ziolkowski said.

Reese cited that in other words it takes one year between here, Scranton and Harrisburg in getting approval.

Referring to federal monies Reese said, "You can't count on it until you have it in your hand. The best we can hope for is to operate on a six months financial basis between the county commissioners and the federal government allocation."

Reimbursement possibilities Ziolkowski stated that the earliest reimbursement for the funds looked like June.

Reese claimed that the planning commission's hands would be tied and that it could not adequately prepare a 12 month budget on this basis. He suggested submitting a six month operational budget in lieu of the uncertainty of the HUD funds.

Reese then asked, "What if the county commissioners turn down our request for $41,000?" "This was the reason why one of our members resigned," Ziolkowski said.

Reese suggested that he and John Mills and new board member, David Neison, review the commission's financial status to arrive at a compromise on a more sound financial basis.

The commission unanimously recorded a vote of thanks for services rendered by the three outgoing planners, chairman Ralph E. Reppert, Chester S. Miller, vice president of Ottaway Newspapers-Radio, Inc. and Donald DeOtte, past chairman.

An agenda of the 1967 accomplishments of the planners was submitted to each board member.

Among the accomplishments listed were the development and preparation of mapping program, initiation and completion of the county FHA water and sewer study, county organization and fiscal analysis study, county space analysis study, Tocks Island planning district study and acquisition of additional land and a building adjacent to the Third Street playground in Stroudsburg's First Ward.

Also, cooperation with various regional agencies: Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council, Delaware River Basin Commission, Soil Conservation Service, and the Economic Development Council of Northeast Pennsylvania.

After the planner's meeting the subdivision review committee reviewed four sketch plans.

The committee recommended conditional approval, subject to review by Price Township supervisors, a preliminary plan of Timber Hill.

The committee suggested to the land developers that they modify a utility and drainage easement to a general easement which would include a road right-of-way. Also included under suggestions was an easement modification and profile of roads and a tie into existing lots.

Three sketch plans were also reviewed.

Courtland St. Plaza plan presented 'second chance'

By RICK METHOT

Pocono Record Reporter EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg Courtland St. Plaza Urban Renewal plan, once rejected by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, has been given a "second chance" according to King Beers, executive director of the Redevelopment Authority of Monroe County.

Beers said during a Tuesday meeting that word has been received from HUD offices in Philadelphia that the $2.3 million project might have a chance for approval if certain conditions were met by the Redevelopment Authority.

The project, calling for redeveloping a 30-acre tract in East Stroudsburg, was rejected by HUD in November as it did not meet Federal stipulations concerning housing units.

Grounds of rejection At an authority meeting Nov. 21, Beers said the doubtful project had been rejected on the grounds that HUD maintained the application did not include proposals that would "significantly" contribute to the expansion of housing units for low and moderate income families.

Following the news Beers fired a letter to HUD claiming that the department had made a "presumption" on the breakdown of low, moderate, and high income housing.

According to Beers the Plaza plans include more than the required percentage for low and moderate housing as set by HUD in following National Goals and Urban Renewal Priorities.

Tuesday Beers said that HUD is now requesting deletion of all references to high income housing from the application, and provision for at least 50 per cent low and moderate housing facilities.

The executive director said that both of these stipulations would be met and a revised application would be submitted "within the month."

Following the meeting Beers said that conversations with HUD officials indicated the project would have a "good chance" for approval.

Plan abandoned In other authority business Beers said that plans to remove the massive rockpile at the corner of Bridge and S. Courtland streets in the borough have been abandoned in the light of bids higher than anticipated by the authority.

A $224,000 bid had been opened in December from the Belmont Contracting Co., Pottstown, which the authority agreed to be in excess of an estimate by Edward Hess, authority engineer.

The director said that a late bid submitted by the J. H. Beers Construction Co., Bangor, was also in excess of planned costs.

According to Beers the authority was thinking "in the neighborhood of $50,000" when the project was first planned three years ago.

Beers told authority members at Tuesday's meeting that a recent check of an original bidder revealed that the low bid on such a project would be nearly $150,000, triple the amount estimated by the authority.

Public opinion Beers added that state regulations pertaining to blasting and some converse public opinion were also factors considering the project.

A check of Acme officials and the East Stroudsburg Planning and Zoning Commission revealed they had no plans for the site, Beers said.

In reference to the Courtland St. project, Beers told members the only work remaining was the widening of S. Crystal St. from 25 to 40 feet and Federal St. an alleyway behind the Lanterman Funeral Home, to 35 feet. The construction of a retaining wall near railroad property will also be completed.

Beers affirmed that all work remaining in the project "would be completed in 1968."

He dismissed the rockpile plan as being "financially impossible" for the authority.

Reviewing the Lincoln Ave. Redevelopment area status Beers said the only land remaining following today's sale to Redmond Realty Corp. would be a 16-acre tract under option to Hy Goldfeld, a Stanford, Conn., developer.

Goldfeld's seven-month option will expire March 31, according to Beers who said he plans to begin to "seek out" anyone who ever had an interest in the area in case the Goldfeld plans fizzle.

Speaking on a recent meeting in Stroudsburg, sponsored by the Stroudsburg Methodist Church, to discuss housing and development problems, Beers said he wished to reaffirm the authority's desire to help in any plans that would provide for the improvement of Stroudsburg's First Ward area, long regarded as a "blight" section of the borough.

Shift in emphasis Beers said he felt that a Federal shift in emphasis on such projects from commercial to residential could possibly prompt further investigation into the section on the part of Stroudsburg Borough Council.

In a final matter the authority granted an extension of residence to James Roberts, Lincoln Ave., until March 31.

Roberts, living in the project area, was granted an extension four months ago by the authority after maintaining he was unable to find a place to live.

Authority secretary Elmer D. Christine stated that the agreement to allow Roberts to remain was contingent upon his agreement to pay rent to the authority. Roberts has been living in the area rent free for the past four months.

Following a lengthy discussion between the authority and Roberts it was agreed that the resident would pay $50 to the authority for the more than two-month extension on a pro-rated basis in event he should move before the extension expires March 31.

Stroudsburg police probe stolen car

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg Borough Police are investigating a stolen car reported to them Tuesday at 12:35 a.m.

A car owned by the Gulf Leasing Co. of Philadelphia, and driven by Robert G. Harky, Mapleshade, N.J., was parked in front of Harky's room at Motel Inn Towne. The driver went inside to make a phone call. When he came out the car was gone.

Harky left the keys in the ignition and the motor running.

Flory still in hospital

STROUDSBURG — Jesse R. S. Flory, vice president of East Stroudsburg National Bank is currently recovering from a fractured ankle and is still under doctors care at the Monroe County General Hospital.

"He is doing very fine," Mrs. Flory said, "but the doctor has not given any definite time of release." "He will probably be with a cast on his right ankle for about three or four months," she added.

Flory suffered the fractured ankle while walking along the driveway toward his car and slipping on the ice Saturday morning.

Firemen halt blaze

TANNERSVILLE — Pocono Twp. firemen had their first fire for 1968 Tuesday at 11:45 a.m.

Firemen were called to the home of Howard Dietz, about one mile east of Tannersville on Rt. 715, to extinguish a chimney fire.

Three trucks and nine firemen were dispatched and they returned to the firehouse about one hour later.

Michener, Casey address county Con-Con visitors

HARRISBURG — A famous author and a former state senator Tuesday warned that the Constitutional Convention must be creative and meet the needs of the 21st century.

James Michener of Piquette, Bucks County, Con-Con secretary and the author of such books as "Hawaii," "The Source" and "Fables of the South Pacific," told a group of visiting Monroe County residents:

"I have heard less points of view of the 21st century than I would like to hear."

Robert Casey said the delegates should not be entirely concerned with the restrictive view of "what the voters will accept," rather the revised constitution should help solve the problems of urban sprawl, housing, job retraining and under-education.

Narrow question

"I don't intend to be bound by the narrow question of 'Will the people approve?' We must make a judgement in our own minds to determine how far we can go and still bring the people along.

"I am not for the approach which asks, 'Will the people approve or not?'" said Casey, who is first vice president of the convention.

While lauding the work done by the delegates, Michener said the convention is more conservative than he would have liked.

Jokingly, Michener threatened to write a book about the proceedings and spell all the delegates' names wrong if they don't come up with an acceptable charter.

Attending from Monroe County were:

County Commissioners Nancy Shukaitis, Arlington (Bud) Martin and Elwood (Pickles) Hintze; Walter Melnikoff and Carl Majer, of the social studies department of Pocono Mountain High School; Harry Rider, Cresco, state committeeman in the 20th Senatorial District.

Also, Rev. Charles Adams, pastor of the Tannersville Lutheran Parish; Rev. Elmer Meissner, pastor of the Tannersville Parish of the United Church of Christ; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Sweeney of S. Eighth St., Stroudsburg, and Lawrence Butz, Pleasant Valley Manor administrator.

The Republican commissioner said Tuesday the state agency said it would make payment of $11,375 for two quarterly payments from July 1 to Jan. 1, 1969.

The Republican commissioner said the funds would be paid to the county and in turn to the Mental Health group.

Mrs. Shukaitis reported that the Mental Health group, headed by Thomas Foley, administrator, has received no payments to date promised by the state and that the application had been submitted in June.

She said Tuesday the state agency said it would make payment of $11,375 for two quarterly payments from July 1 to Jan. 1, 1969.

The Republican commissioner said the funds would be paid to the county and in turn to the Mental Health group.

Profitable 'sidetrip'

Mental Health funds promised

HARRISBURG — A "sidetrip assignment" for Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis, Monroe County Commissioner in Harrisburg for Monroe County Day at the state Constitutional Convention, has apparently paid off in a promise to forward bottled-up Tri-County Mental Health funds to the county.

According to Mrs. Shukaitis, financial officer of the Tri-County group, a meeting with Andrew Speller, director of the Division of Fiscal Management, has resulted in a promise of $11,375 in Mental Health funds, "within 10 days."

of the agencies.

The analysis of the 1967-1968 campaign showed that public Buck Hill Community Service; Barrett Community and Tobyhanna Army Depot reached or bettered their goals. The success of the county campaign, despite lack of workers, was attributed to the letters sent out by headquarters.

Subscribers low

In other discussion on the campaign it was pointed out that the total of 6,333 subscribers was low compared to the total labor force in the county.

The decision on what to do about next year's campaign quota was referred to an executive committee which will report within the month.

Within that month, there will also be the annual meeting of the Monroe County Community Chest and Council with Feb. 8 set as the tentative date.

Ralph E. Reppert, chairman of the Community Chest, thanked all those who had worked so hard to reach the goals and termed the year a successful one.

He also had a challenge for the future. "We must continue to supply the money necessary for the services provided by our member agencies, or we are not fulfilling our function as a Community Chest," he said.

Mrs. Ethel West, executive secretary, presented both Reppert and Miller with scrapbooks of their year's achievements.

A chart of the campaign just concluded follows:

Michener, Casey address county Con-Con visitors

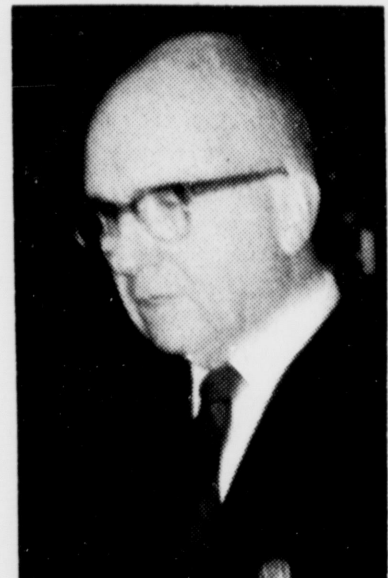

HARRISBURG — A famous author and a former state senator Tuesday warned that the Constitutional Convention must be creative and meet the needs of the 21st century.

James Michener of Pipeville, Bucks County, Con-Con secretary and the author of such books as "Hawaii," "The Source" and "Tales of the South Pacific," told a group of visiting Monroe County residents:

"I have heard less points of view of the 21st century than I would like to hear."

Robert Casey said the delegates should not be entirely concerned with the restrictive view of "what the voters will accept," rather the revised constitution should help solve the problems of urban sprawl, housing, job retraining and under-education.

Narrow question
"I don't intend to be bound by the narrow question of 'Will the people approve?' We must make a judgement in our own minds to determine how far we

James A. Michener

While lauding the work done by the delegates, Michener said the convention is more conservative than he would have liked.

Jokingly, Michener threatened to write a book about the proceedings and spell all the delegates' names wrong if they don't come up with an acceptable charter.

Attending from Monroe County were:

County Commissioners Nancy Shukaitis, Arlington (Bud) Martin and Elwood (Pickles) Hintze; Walter Melnikoff and Carl Majer, of the social studies department of Pocono Mountain High School; Harry Rider, Cresco, state committeeman in the 20th Senatorial District.

Also, Rev. Charles Adams, pastor of the Tannersville Lutheran Parish; Rev. Elmer Meissner, pastor of the Tannersville Parish of the United Church of Christ; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Sweeney of S. Eighth St., Stroudsburg, and Lawrence Butz, Pleasant Valley Manor administrator.

can go and still bring the people along.

"I am not for the approach which asks, 'Will the people approve or not?'" said Casey, who is first vice president of the convention.

Profitable 'sidetrip'

Mental Health funds promised

HARRISBURG — A "sidetrip assignment" for Mrs. Nancy Shukaitis, Monroe County Commissioner in Harrisburg for Monroe County Day at the state Constitutional Convention, has apparently paid off in a promise to forward bottled-up Tri-County Mental Health funds to the county.

According to Mrs. Shukaitis, financial officer of the Tri-County group, a meeting with Andrew Speller, director of the Division of Fiscal Management, has resulted in a promise of $11,375 in Mental Health funds, "within 10 days."

Mrs. Shukaitis reported that the Mental Health group, headed by Thomas Foley, administrator, has received no payments to date promised by the state and that the application had been submitted in June.

She said Tuesday the state agency said it would make payment of $11,375 for two quarterly payments from July 1, to Jan. 1, 1968.

The Republican commissioner said the funds would be paid to the county and in turn to the Mental Health group.

Planners reorganize for year

STROUDSBURG — Marshall C. Reese was unanimously elected chairman of the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday night during a meeting here in the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council Office.

Other officers elected to a one-year term were Vance Megargel, vice chairman and Joseph A. Lisicky, secretary-treasurer.

John Mills, chairman of the budget committee, reviewed the commission's 1968 proposed phase two budget of $41,000. Mills explained that after approval of the executive committee board the budget was presented to the Monroe County Commissioners for approval.

The budget shows a 46 per cent increase over last year's $28,000.

Mills cited a temporary breakdown of the budget: $29,000, salary; $4,000, fixed charges and $5,000, operation and other expenses.

An early acceptance of the 701 grant by the federal government could lower the proposed budget, Mills pointed out.

Reese wondered if there was any possibility of dovetailing the fiscal and calendar years of the 701 Housing and Urban Development funds with local planning so as to expedite the arrival of the 701 monies.

Leonard Ziolkowski, executive director of the planning commission, said that work was started last March on dovetailing these years into a state, county and local planning setup.

He said phase one of the 701 project was not given approval until May, and was then amended in October.

In November it was reviewed in Harrisburg, and this it took from November to the present time to receive the application.

"The Harrisburg office told me that Monroe County's application has the highest priority and it assured me that the application will be approved in March," Ziolkowski said.

Reese cited that in other words it takes one year between here, Scranton and Harrisburg in getting approval.

Referring to federal monies Reese said, "You can't count on it until you have it in your hand. The best we can hope for is to operate on a six months financial basis between the county commissioners and the federal government allocation."

Reimbursement possibilities
Ziolkowski stated that the earliest reimbursement for the funds looked like June.

Reese claimed that the planning commission's hands would be tied and that it could not adequately prepare a 12 month budget on this basis. He suggested submitting a six month operational budget in lieu of the uncertainty of the HUD funds.

Reese then asked, "What if the county commissioners turn down our request for $41,000?" "This was the reason why one of our members resigned," Ziolkowski said.

Reese suggested that he and John Mills and new board member, David Neilson, review the commission's financial status to arrive at a compromise on a more sound financial basis.

The commission unanimously recorded a vote of thanks for services rendered by the three outgoing planners, chairman Ralph E. Reppert, Chester S. Miller, vice president of Ottawa-Way Newspapers-Rad io, Inc. and Donald DeOtte, past chairman.

An agenda of the 1967 accomplishments of the planners was submitted to each board member.

Among the accomplishments listed were the development and preparation of mapping program, initiation and completion of the county FHA water and sewer study, county organization and fiscal analysis study, county space analysis study, Tocks Island planning district study and acquisition of additional land and a building adjacent to the Third Street playground in Stroudsburg's First Ward.

Also, cooperation with various regional agencies: Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council, Delaware River Basin Commission, Soil Conservation Service, and the Economic Development Council of Northeast Pennsylvania.

After the planner's meeting the subdivision review committee reviewed four sketch plans.

The committee recommended conditional approval, subject to review by Price Township supervisors, a preliminary plan of Timber Hill.

The committee suggested to the land developers that they modify a utility and drainage easement to a general easement which would include a road right-of-way. Also included under suggestions was an easement modification and profile of roads and a tie into existing lots.

Three sketch plans were also reviewed.

Courtland St. Plaza plan presented 'second chance'

By RICK METHOT

Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg Courtland St. Plaza Urban Renewal plan, once rejected by the Department of Housing and Urban Development, has been given a "second chance" according to King Beers, executive director of the Redevelopment Authority of Monroe County.

Beers said during an authority meeting Tuesday that word has been received from HUD offices in Philadelphia that the $2.3 million project might have a chance for approval if certain conditions were met by the Redevelopment Authority.

The project, calling for redeveloping a 30-acre tract in East Stroudsburg, was rejected by HUD in November as it did not meet Federal stipulations concerning housing units.

Grounds of rejection
At an authority meeting Nov. 21, Beers said the doubtful project had been rejected on the grounds that HUD maintained the application did not include proposals that would "significantly" contribute to the expansion of housing units for low and moderate income families.

Following the news Beers fired a letter to HUD claiming that the department had made a "presumption" on the breakdown of low, moderate, and high income housing.

According to Beers the Plaza plans include more than the required percentage for low and moderate housing as set by HUD in following National Goals and Urban Renewal Priorities.

Tuesday Beers said that HUD is now requesting deletion of all references to high income housing from the application, and provision for at least 50 per cent low and moderate housing facilities.

The executive director said that both of these stipulations would be met and a revised application would be submitted "within the month."

Following the meeting Beers said that conversations with HUD officials indicated the project would have a "good chance" for approval.

Plan abandoned
In other authority business Beers said that plans to remove the massive rockpile at the corner of Bridge and S. Courtland streets in the borough have been abandoned in the light of bids higher than anticipated by the authority.

A $224,000 bid had been opened in December from the Belmont Contracting Co., Pottstown, which the authority agreed to be in excess of an estimate by Edward Hess, authority engineer.

The director said that a late bid submitted by the J. H. Beers Construction Co., Bangor, was also in excess of planned costs.

According to Beers the authority was thinking "in the neighborhood of $50,000" when the project was first planned three years ago.

Beers told authority members at Tuesday's meeting that a recent check of an original bidder revealed that the low bid on such a project would be nearly $150,000, triple the amount estimated by the authority.

Public opinion
Beers added that state regulations pertaining to blasting and some converse public opinion were also factors considering the project.

A check of Acme officials and the East Stroudsburg Planning and Zoning Commission revealed they had no plans for the site, Beers said.

In reference to the Courtland St. project, Beers told members the only work remaining was the widening of S. Crystal St. from 25 to 40 feet and Federal St., an alleyway behind the Lanterman Funeral Home, to 35 feet. The construction of a retaining wall near railroad property will also be completed.

Beers affirmed that all work remaining in the project "would be completed in 1968."

He dismissed the rockpile plan as being "financially impossible" for the authority.

Reviewing the Lincoln Ave. Redevelopment area status Beers said the only land remaining following today's sale to Redmond Realty Corp. would be a 16-acre tract under option to Hy Goldfeld, a Stanford, Conn., developer.

Goldfeld's seven-month option will expire March 31, according to Beers who said he plans to begin to "seek out" anyone who ever had an interest in the area in case the Goldfeld plans fizzle.

Speaking on a recent meeting in Stroudsburg, sponsored by the Stroudsburg Methodist Church, to discuss housing and development problems, Beers said he wished to reaffirm the authority's desire to help in any plans that would provide for the improvement of Stroudsburg's First Ward area, long regarded as a "blight" section of the borough.

Shift in emphasis
Beers said he felt that a Federal shift in emphasis in such projects from commercial to residential could possibly promote further investigation into the section on the part of Stroudsburg Borough Council.

In a final matter the authority granted an extension of residence to James Roberts, Lincoln Ave., until March 31.

Roberts, living in the project area, was granted an extension four months ago by the authority after maintaining he was unable to find a place to live.

Authority secretary Elmer D. Christine stated that the agreement to allow Roberts to remain was contingent upon his agreement to pay rent to the authority. Roberts has been living in the area rent free for the past four months.

Following a lengthy discussion between the authority and Roberts it was agreed that the authority would pay $50 to the renter for the more than two-month extension on a pro-rated basis in event he should move before the extension expires.

Beers low bidder on trio of sites

EAST STROUDSBURG — The J. H. Beers Construction Co., Bangor, is the apparent low bidder for construction of three proposed tourist information sites on the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

A fourth bid, for the Kittatinny area site, may be bid separately.

Beers was one of three companies submitting bids that were opened Tuesday at 2 p.m. in the real estate office of the National Park Service in East Stroudsburg.

The local company bid a total of $358,603 for the three sites, including all units of the specifications set by the Park Service.

Other bids for the same work were, B. G. Coon Construction Co., Luzerne, $446,445, and Barnard Construction Co., Pompton Plains, N.J., $388,669.

Beers was also low bidder on the three sites with seeding and landscaping work deducted with a bid of $313,633.

Other bids for the sites less deductions were, Coon, $399,050, and Barnard, $353,414.

Beers was also low bidder for specifications calling for construction of the parking areas and building demolition on two of the three Pennsylvania sites, deleting the Resort Point facility, near the borough of Delaware Water Gap.

The bids were, Beers, $295,488; Barnard, $322,952, and Coon, $360,851.

Low bidder for the fourth site, the Dunnfield area on the New Jersey side, was the Barnard Co. with a figure of $74,515 as opposed to $90,130 from Beers, and $92,537 from the Coon Co.

Warren J. Oliver, representative of the contracting office for design and construction of the Philadelphia division of the National Park Service, said the submitted bids would be reviewed and awards may be made "within two weeks."

He said that estimated Park Service cost of the four areas was set at $365,298, below all three bids submitted Tuesday, and added that a decision to fluctuate from that amount would be up to service management.

The four proposed areas are, Resort Point, Point of Gap, in the former Indian Head Stop, Bear Stop, and Dunnfield, in New Jersey.

Representatives of all three companies submitting bids were present at Tuesday's meeting.

Stroudsburg police probe stolen car

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg Borough Police are investigating a stolen car reported to them Tuesday at 12:35 a.m.

A car owned by the Gulf Leasing Co. of Philadelphia, and driven by Robert G. Haury, Mapleshade, N.J., was parked in front of Haury's room at Motel Inn Towne. The driver went inside to make a phone call. When he came out the car was gone.

Haury left the keys in the ignition and the motor running.

Flory still in hospital

STROUDSBURG — Jesse R. S. Flory, vice president of East Stroudsburg National Bank is currently recovering from a fractured ankle and is still under doctors care at the Monroe County General Hospital.

"He is doing very fine," Mrs. Flory said, "but the doctor has not given any definite time of release." "He will probably be with a cast on his right ankle for about three or four months," she added.

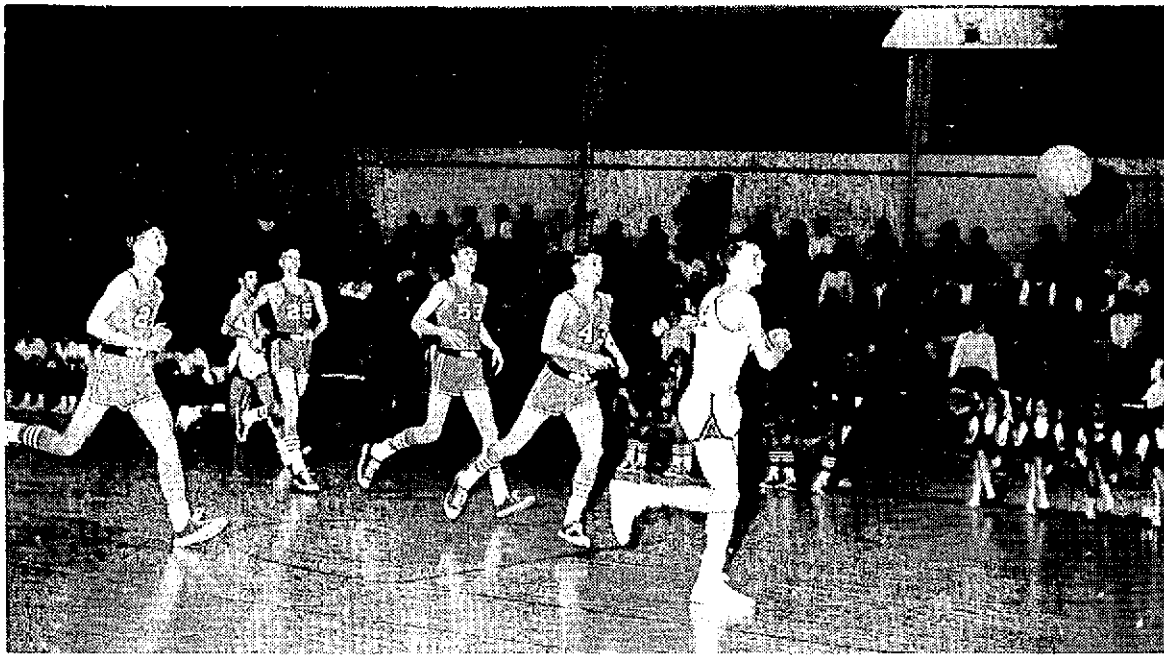

Flory suffered the fractured ankle while walking along the driveway toward his car and slipping on the ice Saturday morning.

Firemen halt blaze

TANNERSVILLE — Pocono Twp. firemen had their first fire for 1968 Tuesday at 11:45 a.m.

Firemen were called to the home of Howard Dietz, about one mile east of Tannersville on Rt. 715, to extinguish a chimney fire.

Three trucks and nine firemen were dispatched and they returned to the firehouse about one hour later.

ESSC matmen put win skein on line at Bloomsburg

EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg State wrestling team puts its 22-dual meet win streak on the line tonight when it travels to Bloomsburg to take on Russ Houk's Huskies.

For those who like to compare scores against common foes, the Warriors defeated Oswego State from New York, 20-11 while Bloomsburg posted a 20-9 victory.

The Huskies are strong at 123; 137 in Ron Russo; 152 in Joe Gerst; 160 in sophomore Arnie Thompson and at 187 in John Stetzman.

ESSC coach Red Witman said Tuesday night it might just be possible that Russo would drop down to 130 and face co-captain Ned Bushong. Russo defeated Bushong at 137 in this year's Wilkes Tournament. Gerst has been hampered by a knee injury this season and has not wrestled the last two dual meets. Witman wasn't sure if Gerst is hurt that seriously or if Houk is "saving" him.

Thompson is a two-time New Jersey State champion from Washington, N.J., and pinned John Pitzer, his foe tonight, in last year's freshmen meet. Stetzman competed at heavyweight as a freshman last year and gave Rich Schumacher a hard time before "Shokey" came through.

The ESSC lineup remains the same with the exception at 137 where Tom Best, former Parkland standout, will make his first appearance of the season. Jim Purdy is still having trouble making weight.

Whitman plans to go with Frank Coco (115), Steve Bryant (123), Bushong (130), Best (137), Jerry McDonald (145), Dan Rossi (152), Pitzer (160), Bob DeVore (167), Gary Cook (177), Greg Jones (191) and Schumacher in the unlimited class.

If the Warriors are to extend their streak they must get wins from Bushong, McDonald, Rossi Cook and Schumacher and then pick up another one along the way.

Witman feels the key bout of the night could be at 115 where Coco, a former Stroudsburg star, gets his first chance to wrestle in over a month. Witman said "if we lose here we're going to have to scratch one up somewhere along the line".

Bloomsburg brings a 4-1-1 dual meet record into the PSSC match with the only loss to Indiana State of Terre Haute, Ind. It was tied by Appalachian State Teachers College and has also beaten Miami of Ohio.

Mounts lose by 10 to Northampton

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg High came up with one of its better showings of the season Tuesday night but it wasn't enough to get it into the victory column.

Northampton, one of the pre-season picks in the Lehigh Valley League, jumped out to a 17-11 first period lead enroute to an 87-77 victory over the winless Mounts.

Arley Williams led a trio of losers in double figures with 30 points although netting only one field goal in the opening period.

Williams had 12 of his team's 21 points in the second period and 10 more in the fourth session. Mel Abel had eight of 13 points in the third period and Bill Weber contributed seven points in the final period.

The Kids had five players in double figures with Covach the leader with 26, 13 in the third period. Steffie and Mike Bahnick each had 17, Marakovits 12 and Gabryluk 10.

A 30-point effort by Jim Sagra led the Northampton reserves to an 80-37 romp in the preliminary contest.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, who emerged as American League baseball champions after a spectacular ending to a close pennant race, were named the Sports Team-of-the-Year for 1967 Tuesday in the annual Associated Press Poll.

The Red Sox drew 133 first-place votes and 623 points in the balloting by 372 sports writers and broadcasters.

Their average age is just under 26 years old, and 11 are offensive players and nine play defense.

Miami, an AFL expansion team two years ago, was exempted from the draft, but the other eight clubs supplied lists of 11 players each from which Cincinnati made its initial choices.

Bangor knocks Cavaliers from first half campaign

BANGOR — East Stroudsburg's hopes for the first half flag in the Lehigh-Northampton League's Northern Division are over but Bangor is still alive.

The Slaters jumped back into the title picture Tuesday night by rolling over the Cavaliers, 88-51. Nazareth remained unbeaten (5-0) in league play with a 63-60 win over Hellertown.

Bangor is now 3-1 in league play and still must meet Hellertown and Nazareth. Eastburg is 2-2 in league action. Bill Pensyl's five stunned the Cavaliers early with a 26-point first period and were never headed. Frank Scagliotta pumped in 28 points to raise his seasonal output to 272 points. John Swope added 13, Al Lobb 12 and Ridley Hughes 10.

John Hood, the top scorer in the division, was limited to 18 points. Hood now has 307 points for the season and 103 in league action. Tom Kishpaugh with 17 was the only other Cav in double figures.

Press effective
Scagliotta scored Bangor's first three points on a foul and 15-foot jumper before Tom Kishpaugh got Eastburg on the board with a jumper at the 5:25 mark.

John Swope, who controlled the boards in the first period, then scored on a drive and Brad Farino converted a steal into a two-pointer to give Bangor a 7-2 lead.

John Hood then hit a short jumper and made a pair of fouls to cut the deficit to 7-6.

But Swope followed with a three-point play and a tap in to up the count to 12-6 before John Hood followed up his own missed shot.

Bangor's press then began to get to the Cavs as Dave Buskirk, Scagliotta and Al Lobb each hit two-pointers to give Bangor an 18-8 lead with 2:28 left.

Joe Garvia halted the spurt with a foul but Scagliotta retaliated with three quick baskets and Bangor had a 24-9 edge with 1:27 left in the period. John Hood and Swope traded baskets before one of two fouls by the former made the score 28-12 after eight minutes.

East Stroudsburg then went 3½ minutes without a field goal at the start of the second period enabling the Slaters to pull away to a 36-15 lead. Buskirk and Ridley Hughes each made a pair of fouls and Scagliotta a short jumper before Steve Nauman got Eastburg's first point at the 5:31 mark of the period.

Parkland rallies for 69-66 win

PEN ARGYL — Parkland High outscored Pen Argyl 18-7 in the fourth period Tuesday night to gain a come-from-behind 69-66 victory in the Lehigh-Northampton League's Northern Division.

With Bob Parsons contributing 26 points in the first half the Knights raced out to a 45-31 halftime advantage. At one point in the half, Pen Argyl held a 39-29 lead.

But in the second half, Chris Linde and Ron Gross were simply too much for the Knights to handle. Linde had 19 in the second half and Gross 14.

Parkland finally knotted the count at 62-62 on a steal by Gross. Seconds later Gross made another steal and fed Dennis Reiss for the go-ahead field goal.

Bob Parsons, who finished with 36 points, then tied the score for the last time. A foul by Jim Worley and a tap by Linde, one of seven he had in the second half, gave the Trojans a 67-64 lead.

John Parsons cut the gap to 67-66. Then with a minute left, Pen Argyl gained possession and worked for the final shot. But with 10 seconds left, the Knights lost the ball and Gross turned it into a field goal.

Linde finished with 31 and Gross 19 for Parkland, now 2-2 in the league and 7-5 overall. Pen Argyl is 0-5 in the L-N and 6-9 overall. Parkland hit on 29 of 53 shots from the floor as compared to 24 of 61 for Pen Argyl.

Bengals select Buffalo's Burnett

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Running back Bobby Burnett of the Buffalo Bills, the American Football League's rookie of the year in 1965, heads a list of 20 Eastern Division players selected by the Cincinnati Bengals in the AFL's expansion draft Tuesday.

Other top names selected by the Bengals from the Eastern clubs were Boston's Joe Bellino, the former Navy running back; halfback J. D. Garrett and defensive back Ron Hall, also from the Patriots.

In addition to Burnett, Buffalo surrendered tackle Gary Bugenhagen, its No. 4 draft choice from last season and an All-American at Syracuse.

Eastern Division champion Houston surrendered linebacker Danny Brabham, like Burnett a former No. 1 draft choice.

Chosen from the New York Jets were linemen John Matlock, Jim Wasiewicz and Pete Perreault.

The Bengals' Western Division selections, although complete, will not be released until Wednesday morning. The 20 Eastern Division players selected by Cincinnati represent a total of 65 years of playing experience, an average of better than three years a man.

Their average age is just under 26 years old, and 11 are offensive players and nine play defense.

Miami, an AFL expansion team two years ago, was exempted from the draft, but the other eight clubs supplied lists of 11 players each from which Cincinnati made its initial choices.

ESSC matmen put win skein on line at Bloomsburg

EAST STROUDSBURG — The East Stroudsburg State wrestling team puts its 22-dual meet win streak on the line tonight when it travels to Bloomsburg to take on Russ Houk's Huskies.

For those who like to compare scores against common foes, the Warriors defeated Oswego State from New York, 20-11 while Bloomsburg posted a 20-9 victory.

The Huskies are strong at 123; 137 in Ron Russo; 152 in Joe Gerst; 160 in sophomore Arnie Thompson and at 167 in John Stetzman.

ESSC coach Red Witman said Tuesday night it might just be possible that Russo would drop down to 130 and face co-captain Ned Bushong. Russo defeated Bushong at 137 in this year's Wilkes Tournament. Gerst has been hampered by a knee injury this season and has not wrestled the last two dual meets. Witman wasn't sure if Gerst is hurt that seriously or if Houk is 'saving' him.

Thompson is a two-time New Jersey State champion from Washington, N.J., and pinned John Pitzer, his foe tonight, in last year's freshmen meet. Stetzman competed at heavyweight as a frosh last year and gave Rich Schumacher a hard time before "Shooley" came through.

The ESSC lineup remains the same with the exception at 137 where Tom Best, former Parkland standout, will make his first appearance of the season. Jim Purdy is still having trouble making weight.

Whitman plans to go with Frank Coco (115), Steve Bryant (123), Bushong (130), Best (137), Jerry McDonald (145), Dan Rossi (152), Pitzer (160), Bob DeVore (167), Gary Cook (177), Greg Jones (191) and Schumacher in the unlimited class.

If the Warriors are to extend their streak they must get wins from Bushong, McDonald, Rossi Cook and Schumacher and then pick up another one along the way.

Witman feels the key bout of the night could be at 115 where Coco, a former Stroudsburg star, gets his first chance to wrestle in over a month. Witman said "if we lose here we're going to have to scratch one up somewhere along the line".

Bloomsburg brings a 4-1-1 dual meet record into the PSSC match with the only loss to Indiana State of Terre Haute, Ind. It was tied by Appalachian State Teachers College and has also beaten Miami of Ohio.

Mounts lose by 10 to Northampton

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg High came up with one of its better showings of the season Tuesday night but it wasn't enough to get it into the victory column.

Northampton, one of the pre-season picks in the Lehigh Valley League, jumped out to a 17-11 first period lead enroute to an 87-77 victory over the winless Mounties.

Arley Williams led a trio of losers in double figures with 30 points although netting only one field goal in the opening period.

Williams had 12 of his team's 21 points in the second period and 10 more in the fourth session. Mel Abel had eight of 13 points in the third period and Bill Weber contributed seven points in the final period. The kids had five players in double figures with Covach the leader with 26, 13 in the third period. Steffie and Mike Bahnick each had 17, Marakovits 12 and Gabryluk 10.

A 30-point effort by Jim Suga led the Northampton reserves to an 80-37 romp in the preliminary contest.

Bangor knocks Cavaliers from first half campaign

BANGOR — East Stroudsburg's hopes for the first half flag in the Lehigh-Northampton League's Northern Division are over but Bangor is still alive.

The Slaters jumped back into the title picture Tuesday night by rolling over the Cavaliers, 88-51. Nazareth remained unbeaten (5-0) in league play with a 63-60 win over Hellertown.

Bangor is now 3-1 in league play and still must meet Hellertown and Nazareth. Eastburg is 2-2 in league action. Bill Pensyl's five stunned the Cavaliers early with a 26-point first period and were never headed. Frank Scagliotta pumped in 28 points to raise his seasonal output to 272 points. John Swope added 13, Al Lobb 12 and Ridley Hughes 10.

John Hood, the top scorer in the division, was limited to 18 points. Hood now has 307 points for the season and 103 in league action. Tom Kishpaugh with 17 was the only other Cav in double figures.

Press effective
Scagliotta scored Bangor's first three points on a foul and 15-foot jumper before Tom Kishpaugh got Eastburg on the board with a jumper at the 5:25 mark.

John Swope, who controlled the boards in the first period, then scored on a drive and Brad Farino converted a steal into a two-pointer to give Bangor a 7-2 lead.

John Hood then hit a short jumper and made a pair of fouls to cut the deficit to 7-6.

Parkland rallies for 69-66 win

PEN ARGYL — Parkland High outscored Pen Argyl 18-7 in the fourth period Tuesday night to gain a come-from-behind 69-66 victory in the Lehigh-Northampton League's Northern Division.

With Bob Parsons contributing 26 points in the first half the Knights raced out to a 45-31 halftime advantage. At one point in the half, Pen Argyl held a 39-20 lead.

But in the second half, Chris Linde and Ron Gross were simply too much for the Knights to handle. Linde had 19 in the second half and Gross 14.

Parkland finally knotted the count at 62-all on a steal by Gross. Seconds later Gross made another steal and fed Dennis Reiss for the go-ahead field goal.

Bob Parsons, who finished with 36 points, then tied the score for the last time. A foul by Jim Werley and a tap by Linde, one of seven he had in the second half, gave the Trojans a 67-64 lead.

John Parsons cut the gap to 67-66. Then with a minute left, Pen Argyl gained possession and worked for the final shot. But with 10 seconds left, the Knights lost the ball and Gross turned it into a field goal.

Linde finished with 31 and Gross 19 for Parkland, now 2-2 in the league and 7-5 overall. Pen Argyl is 0-5 in the L-N and 6-9 overall. Parkland hit on 29 of 53 shots from the floor as compared to 24 of 61 for Pen Argyl.

Parkland also won the JV game, 53-45.

The real Nitschke

MIAMI — "Hitler is alive and wearing No. 60."

"They were going to make a movie of Ray Nitschke's life but Bela Lugosi was busy."

"The Green Bay Packers came here by jet but Ray Nitschke just rode his broomstick."

"Q. How come Ray Nitschke didn't get cold Vince Lombardi? A. He thinks Lombardi will be able to hold the Mediterranean for him."

"That wasn't the real Ray Nitschke you saw aiming a kick at Don Perkins in the playoff on national TV — the Real Ray Nitschke wouldn't have missed."

"Q. How come Ray Nitschke didn't get cold playing in 11-below weather? A. His straight-jacket was fur-lined."

"Ray Nitschke's contract called for a guy to wipe the foam off his mouth between plays."

"Ray Nitschke plays middle maniac for the Green Bay Packers."

"Ray Nitschke is just as sane as you or I — he just doesn't want to go back to Elba."

An incautious remark by a player-turned-broadcaster, Tom Brookshier, on coast-to-coast TV has turned Raymond R. Nitschke, occupation, tackler, from a relatively anonymous, quietly-efficient middle linebacker for the Green Bay Packers into something that should be kept out of the moon.

"And now we bring you, the mad man of the Packers, Ray Nitschke!" Brookshier announced triumphantly and the nation expected to see a guy come on with his hat on sideways and his hand tucked underneath his waistcoat.

"Crazy Guggenheim" had been added to the cast of the NFL.

The real Ray Nitschke doesn't care for the sensation at all. First of all, he reprimanded Brookshier, then briefly weighed whether he should call the network and instruct that they say "the views of Tom Brookshier do not necessarily coincide with the views of Ray Nitschke."

Ray Nitschke doesn't see himself at all as a candidate for a padded room, or as someone they should hide razors from or put bars on the windows for.

Dr. Jekyll Image

"Wouldn't you be irked?" he demanded, as he sat by the poolside at an Atlantic Ocean resort in Ft. Lauderdale Friday. "The man made me sound like something that would sit around cutting up paper dolls."

Actually, Ray Nitschke prefers cutting up live quarterbacks. He prefers an image of himself as Dr. Jekyll but there are those who swear hair starts growing out of his cheeks the minute the other guys get to the 20-yard line.

"Nobody wants to be known as a dirty football player," argues Nitschke. "Nor a crazy football player." What about the kicks he aimed at Perkins? "Frustration," explains Nitschke.

"I was mad at myself and I took it out on the ground, I kicked the ground."

There are those who think that if Perkins had been a step slower, Nitschke's cleats would have blood on them. But, if middle linebacker, or "Mike" or "Mabel" as the pros call it, is no place for a licensed lunatic, neither is it any spot for St. Francis of Assisi.

"You have to have a nose for the ball. And you have to like to hit someone," Nitschke explains. "But I don't hate quarterbacks. They're the ones who are drawing the crowds. I hate that little ball to get by my position."

The ball very seldom does. Ray Nitschke, along with Joe Schmidt, now coach of the Lions, brought middle-linebacking to a fine and holy art, largely by the very kind of maniacal play that caught him making an onside kick at Perkins' disappearing posterior.

Orphaned at an early age, and raised by older brothers, Ray Nitschke has had to play life with the kind of wreckless lunacy he roves the line of scrimmage. Football took him out of hand-me-down clothes and box lunches and snowsledding in winter and lawn-cutting in summer, and if all Ray Nitschke has to do is keep a 16-ounce football on the far side of the 50-yard line to preserve this new way of life — well, he challenges, how crazy is he?

Ray feels he has good reason to play with demonic. Once at the University of Illinois, he scored a face mask as a device for sissies and a blind-side block by an Ohio State player on a kickoff-return, scattered his teeth over several parts of the end zone. Nitschke played with bleeding gums for part of his teeth for 60 minutes, and then, after the game, excused himself for the better part of a half-hour while he scoured the turf of Ohio State Stadium for his missing bicusps. "What did you want them for?" someone asked. "Because they belong to me," answered Ray Nitschke.

On another occasion, Ray had a halfback who had not been properly indoctrinated to respect the ancient and honorable profession of linebacking. Ray had him nicely boxed, but thought he would deliver an "R.S.V.P." to the fellow's inviting helmet. Ray broke his arm in three places. The helmet survived. And so did the head.

So, Ray Nitschke is not the "Middle Maniac" or the mad red dog of the Packers. He doesn't need shock treatment, he gives it. The only analysis he undergoes is just before he calls the defensive signals. And if the Dallas Cowboys consider him the All-Pro from the state hospital 11, that's all right with Raymond Nitschke as long as there are spectators at the Super Bowl, and he's the middle madman getting the $15,000. It has a way of improving mental health.

Leopard II to play 10 games in '68

EASTON — Lafayette will play a 10-game football schedule in 1968, Olav B. Kollevoll, Director of Athletics, announced last night.

Three opponents who were not met in 1967, Columbia, Drexel and Colgate, appear on the new schedule.

Lafayette will face Columbia on Sept. 28 in New York City, meet Drexel for the first time ever at home on October 19 and face Colgate at Hamilton, N.Y. on Nov. 16.

Lafayette last played Columbia in 1965, defeating the Lions 14-10. The Leopards last met Colgate in the 1965 season, losing 20-9.

The 1968 schedule includes four Middle Atlantic Conference opponents for the Leopards — Hofstra, Gettysburg and Lehigh all at home and Bucknell on the road.

Lafayette will open its 87th season against Rutgers at New Brunswick, N.J., on Sept. 21, its very first football opponent in its first season of 1968.

The remainder of the schedule includes a home game with Kings Point and a road game at Washington & Lee in Lexington, Va.

Lafayette had a 4-5 record in 1967, beating Bucknell, Washington & Lee, Kings Point and Lehigh. The Leopards lost to Hofstra, Harvard, Delaware Gettysburg and Rutgers.

The 1968 schedule:

Sept. 21, Rutgers, away; 28, Columbia, away.

Oct. 5, Hofstra, home; 12, Washington & Lee, away; 19, Drexel, home; 26, Bucknell, away.

Nov. 2, Gettysburg, home (Homecoming); 9, Kings Point, home; 16, Colgate, away; 23, Lehigh, home.

It would seem to be normal for West to ruff the diamond with the six of spades, but it is easy to see that if West does this, declarer makes the rest of the tricks by winning the club or heart return in dummy, taking a trump finesse, and cashing the ace of trumps.
West is therefore expected (sic) to ruff with the deuce in order to force dummy to overruff with the four and thus prevent declarer from leading a spade through whatever values East may have in trumps.
But when West ruffs with the deuce, South, in turn, is supposed to realize that he will go down if he overruffs with the four. He would subject himself to another diamond ruff by West as soon as East came into the lead with his king of trumps.
So South ominously permits West to win trick three with the deuce of trumps and from then on cannot be stopped from making the contract regardless of what West returns.
It strikes us that West's play of ruffing with the deuce is extremely high - level and not the type of play one would ordinarily think of at the bridge table.
However, South's refusal to overruff with the four when West trumps with the deuce is a much easier play to make. South should reason that West has a higher spade than the four to ruff with and that West is hoping to get another diamond ruff if his partner has the A-x or K-x of trumps.
South should therefore play on the assumption that East has the doubleton king of spades.

Dear Friend,
I want to thank you for "Free-Kiddle-Want Ads." This is my success story.
My ad was in Wed., Dec. 13 paper and at 8:30 a.m. the first call came. My mother said the phone rang a lot after that.
By 7:30 p.m. I had enough money from the ad to buy my family Christmas presents for the first time with my own money.
The people that bought my things seemed very pleased and that made me happy too.
The want ads are very good and the Free Kiddle Ads are even better. You can make people happy by selling them good used things and be happy too because you can earn money to buy gifts for Christmas. Thank you again for the Free Kid-die Want Ads. You guys must like kids.
Sincerely,
Dean Hallet, Age 12

Here is Angela's Ad and Letter

I DON'T want credit! I'll pay American Dollars for a pair of girl's ice Skates. I wear size 9. I have skates to sell. I deliver. Ph. 424-1914. Angela Fitzsimmons, age 12.

Dear Sir:
Just hours after the Record hit the streets on the first day my "free" classified ad appeared I had what I wanted.
I offered good American dollars for a pair of Ice Skates and they changed hands that very day.
My Sister in her ad sold her skates and my brother bought a hard-to-get dime for his coin collection.
I can see the value of these ads when anyone has something to sell or wants to buy.
Thank you.
Angela Fitzsimmons, age 12

Here is Diane's Ad and Letter

WHITE pair of shoe skates with thin double runners. Size 3 and perfect to go into just before single runners. They are in good condition. They are Basco make and only $2.00. Please help me sell them because they don't fit. Diane Primrose age 12. Phone 421-6222.

Dear Sirs:
I never thought my skates would sell because there were so many other ads for skates, but they did! This was the first year I tried also. Now I have extra Christmas money for which I am grateful to you. Thank you very much.
Sincerely yours,
Diane Primrose, age 12

Each of the Runners-Up and Their Families will receive a complimentary Copy of the 1968 Pocono Dining Club Book

This marks the tenth consecutive year The Pocono Record classified department has offered children of this area free want ads for Christmas. A total of 560 children's ads were published without charge during the Christmas season. We find it a very warm and gratifying experience . . . and the phone calls and letters of thanks from children and parents make it all worthwhile. A newspaper strives to serve its readers (of all ages), and we find the "Children's Want Ad Contest" to be one of our most pleasant "duties". To all those who participated, we would like to extend our best wishes. We also hope your experience as a classified ad writer was both enjoyable and rewarding.

A Great Big Thanks to All The Kids Who Ran Ads, From "The Classified Team"
